

Inflationists Push President Away From Inflation

WASHINGTON—A lot of behind-the-scenes factors have been quietly pushing F. D. R. away from his one-time tendency toward inflation.

One of these was the fact most of those yelling for inflation, did not know specifically what they wanted. They were like Representative John J. McSwain, of South Carolina. Questioned as to how, when and what he wanted in the nature of inflation, he replied: "Oh, anything for a change."

Another factor has been the constant hammering away of such advisers as Budget Director Lew Douglas, Under Secretary of the Treasury Dean Acheson and Professor Sprague that inflation is not a cure-all, merely a temporary expedient which in the end brings the country back to where it started.

Finally Roosevelt has been more and more won over to the idea of consumer credit. Make people start buying, he argues. That is why some of the loudest howlers for inflation—Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, for instance—are deserting the inflationary goal and substituting for it the bonus.

And it would not surprise a lot of people if the bonus was paid in the near future.

Punctuality

The President of the United States is not an extremely punctual person.

Sometimes he is an hour late for lunch—when he eats at all. The greatest problem of Marvin McIntyre, his appointment secretary, is to keep callers from piling up on top of each other.

"Don't let him get started talking," is McIntyre's frequent admonition to those about to enter the White House inner sanctum. "You do all the talking. If he gets started, I'll never get these people through."

In view of this, the records of Groton School for the years 1898 and 1899 are most revealing. They show that in both these years young Franklin Roosevelt was among ten boys to receive prizes for punctuality.

The President was then 16 years old.

International Duelists

Henry L. Stimson, Hoover's Japanese-conscious Secretary of State, is coming back to the Capital soon with blood in his gentlemanly eye.

His chief ambition in life now is to put Judge John Bassett Moore on the spot. Moore once was counselor of the Department which Stimson later headed. Since then Moore served on the World Court, became one of the chief international lawyers.

While Stimson was Secretary of State, Moore rode him unmercifully. He criticized him on Latin American policy, the Far East, the Kellogg Pact. In various speeches and articles in Foreign Affairs, Stimson answered back.

But after Stimson stepped out of office, Moore loosed his most scathing blast. He described Stimson as a man whom he "profoundly distrusted" not only because "he had no visible moorings on earth or in the sky, but also because he endangered our own most vital interests."

Stimson is now clearing the decks for a red-hot reply.

Censored

There is at least one high official whose future radio remarks will be scrupulously censored in advance.

Perhaps Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Robert H. Gurnea, the gentleman in question—should not be blamed unduly. The occasion was a festive one. It was the Victory banquet in honor of the triumphant Senators, winners of the American League Baseball championship. The mood of the evening was exuberant; as was that of Mr. Gurnea, raconteur.

WIND CHANGES TO SAVE TOWN FROM FLAMES

Teegardin Elevator, Barn, Garage Destroyed at Duvall, Saturday

LOSS NEAR $18,000

Water Poured on House-Tops by Brigade

Loss of $18,000 was sustained and a number of houses in the village of Duvall, Harrison-twp., narrowly escaped destruction Saturday afternoon when flames swept the elevator and adjoining buildings of the Teegardin Grain Co.

Some estimates placed the loss at $25,000. Most of the damage was covered by insurance. The fire was discovered in the extreme top of the elevator, beset by men in the office, beside the elevator. They hurried to the top of the building where the smoke pouring through the frame but when they reached the fire had nothing with which to fight the fire. They went back to the ground for water but before they could again reach the flames they were beyond control.

Calls were sent to the local fire department and to Ashville but before either could respond the elevator was a mass of flames. Nothing in it was saved. A loss of between 9,000 and 10,000 bushels of wheat and a large quantity of timothy seed was suffered.

BARN, GARAGE LOST

A large barn north of the elevator was destroyed as was a garage.

For a while after the elevator became a furnace it was feared the town might suffer great loss. The wind was blowing from the northwest carrying the flames over the village and sparks were extinguished as they landed on several residences. Bucket brigades were organized and water was poured on house-tops to prevent flames. After a while the wind changed taking the flames from the town. Fire Chief Talmer Wise, who answered the call with the city's small pumper, said that changing wind is all that saved several and possibly a larger number of houses.

A Norfolk & Western railroad engine was detached at Ashville and taken back to Duvall to provide water with which to fight a fire which started in the coal pile. The Ashville pumper helped on this job.

WIRES DESTROYED

Wires of the Scioto Valley Power Co. were burned as were those of the Citizens Telephone Co. Both companies had crews busy in the vicinity of the flames.

As far as can be learned no one was injured in fighting the blaze. The Teegardin elevator has long been active in the northwestern part of the county and it is expected plans will be drawn immediately to rebuild.

Local firemen extinguished a blaze caused by gasoline at the city tool-house in the rear of the engine house early Sunday.

SOCIETY'S LEADERS PUT FINAL TOUCHES ON THIRTIETH SHOW

Meeting Tonight Will Complete Details For Wednesday's Opening; Hedges and Krinn Hold Executive Positions; Purpose of Annual Event Told.

Directors of the thirtieth annual Pumpkin Show meet in City Hall tonight to confer on final details for the opening of the thirtieth annual show. Everything is in readiness for the event but as there always have been and always will be, there are certain finishing touches to be made.

B. T. HEDGES

Mayor B. T. Hedges is serving his sixth consecutive year as chief executive of the Pumpkin Show society. His office automatically makes him president. He has been an efficient Pumpkin Show leader.

Thomas D. Krinn, deputy county auditor and vice president of the Pumpkin Show society, is the veteran of the big attraction. He has served over 20 years and in everyone, if that is possible, his free attractions have been improved. He is a past master at choosing free acts which favorably strike the public's fancy. The music for the Pumpkin Show is also under Mr. Krinn's supervision.

OTHER OFFICERS

Other officers of the Pumpkin Show, all of whom are doing their best to make the Show put another good mark on Circleville's side, of the blotter, are Robert G. Colville, treasurer and director of Department No. 1, having taken both offices upon the death of Thomas F. Jeffries; Mack Parrett, Jr., secretary; Sterling Lamb, assistant secretary; L. T. Shaner, J. W. Crist, G. L. Nickerson, D. L. Buchanan, L. J. Johnson, Proctor W. Baughman and L. E. Miller.

The Pumpkin Show is open to all residents, growers, dealers, merchants, manufacturers and jobbers in Pickaway-co with no entrance fee being charged to exhibitors for premiums. Four thousand dollars in premiums is offered free.

PURPOSE QUOTED

The purpose of the Pumpkin Show is to maintain and promote a more friendly relationship with the patrons and visitors of our community, and to further promote and extend agricultural pursuits, and to award premiums for the display of grain, fruit, vegetables, livestock, poultry, articles of domestic industry, public school displays, and for other displays that are best calculated to promote the general agricultural and household manufacturing interests of Pickaway-co, as in their best judgment will be to the best interests of the society.

Gambling is positively prohibited by the Pumpkin Show society in the general good interests of the society and the public at large.

JURY PROBES AYERS CASE

Former Local Man Charged With Second Degree Death In Ross-Co.

The Ross-co grand jury began deliberations in Chillicothe today with a long session climaxed by an alleged murder case to be heard.

John Ayers of Harrison-twp., Ross-co, a former resident of this city, is charged with the second degree murder of John Stone, alias Bentley on Sept. 6. Stone was shot twice with a shotgun. Ayers pleads self defense.

Nine cases of non support are being investigated with three cases of the more rare charge of failure to provide for aged parents to be reviewed.

Lester S. Reid, Pickaway-co youth, is Ross-co prosecutor.

HINDENBURG IS 86

BERLIN, Oct. 2.—President Paul Von Hindenburg was hailed by the entire German nation today as he celebrated his 86th birthday quietly with his family at his estate in Neudeck, East Prussia.

Cities throughout the country were beflagged in honor of the "grand old man" of the Reich, while all newspapers carried lengthy reviews of his career.

Report 50,000 Dead of Plague

Chinese Provinces Is Stricken; Few Men Strong Enough To Bury Dead.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 2.—At least 50,000 people have died in Hunan province of a mysterious plague, according to reports received here today. The disease was described as resembling malaria.

The plague broke out, according to the advices, in a county of the province bordering on Kiangsi. More than 95 per cent of the county's population of 400,000 are ill.

One message said few men were strong enough to bury the dead.

Merchants Offer Goods At Low Prices This Week

"Welcome to Circleville" is what the merchants say in this issue of The Herald as they celebrate the 30th Annual Pumpkin Show by placing thousands of dollars worth of merchandise on sale to beat the rising market.

During the week consumers are given the opportunity to purchase before the rise increases and it will be to your advantage to read every ad in this Special Pumpkin Show issue of The Herald. As you read the ads make a list of the items you need and want to purchase. When you come to Circleville to attend the Pumpkin Show you can make your shopping trip through the stores easier by having this list with you.

This may be the last time merchandise will be offered at such low prices for each day finds prices advancing and the local merchants are able to give you the advantage of these prices only because they bought early. When present stocks are sold it will be necessary for them to buy at a higher price which in turn means a higher resale price.

So when you attend the Pumpkin Show don't fail to take advantage of the bargains offered and make your trip a profitable and enjoyable one.

THOUSANDS CHEER PRESIDENT UPON HIS ARRIVAL IN CHICAGO

REACHES CITY AT 11:15 A.M.

Address to Deal With Compensation for Veterans of Wars

NAMES FOOD GROUP

Week-End for Executive Filled With Work

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—Cheered by thousands of Legionnaires and townspeople, President Franklin Roosevelt arrived here on a special train at 11:15 a. m. today and immediately left for the stadium to address American Legion delegates.

President Roosevelt's speech was expected to be straight from the shoulder the compensation for veterans to be the highlight.

According to persons near him he planned to deny that the nation owes an obligation to the soldier who is ill but whose illness was not caused by the war. For soldiers who contracted illness while in the service the President was expected to promise generous pensions.

The executive began working on the speech several days ago, but was interrupted many times by pressing official business. Over the week-end he gave his attention to the new federal relief program.

With Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, the president completed plans for a non-profit corporation to administer the relief program, and named Hopkins as its head. The body will buy food, clothing and fuel to whatever extent it is needed, and distribute it to the destitute. The program is backed by approximately $65,000,000 of federal and state money, and Hopkins said he was ready to use it all if necessary.

Other distinguished visitors took the Legion state today. They included Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless, bringing greetings from King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Mussolini, and Count Adolphe De Chambrun, a general of the French army.

MERRYMAKERS BUSY

The Legion merry-makers literally took charge of the World's Fair and downtown Chicago last night. A score of states held impromptu parades through hotel lobbies to the accompaniment of bands and drum corps. They had arrived in some 400 special trains which swelled the crowd to break all past convention attendance records.

Although shouting, conviviality and parading reigned, the executive men had a number of more serious activities in mind during the next few days.

CUBAN BULLET HITS AMERICAN

Man Named Lotspeich Dies As Cuban Troops, Former Officers Fight.

HAVANA, Oct. 2.—An American named George Lotspeich was shot and killed by a stray bullet today as Cuban troops and former army officers lodged in the National hotel fought a pitched battle which took a reported toll of seven lives.

Three officers and three soldiers were reported killed in the battle, while an undetermined number were injured.

CAUSE MYSTERY

The cause of the affray was a mystery, but reports stated the troops with or without official authorization, attempted to seize the hotel. Some 300 officers who served under former President Gerardo Machado have been besieged there for weeks.

The officers shot from places of concealment near hotel windows, while guns also rattled from the protection of the Carreno building. Riot conditions prevailed about the Edificio Carreno.

In the confusion, it was impossible to obtain an accurate check of casualties.

Apparently there were no casualties among the soldiers who boasted to have killed unnumbered officers as the battle waxed hot.

HOSPITAL NEWS

Mrs. Rebecca Orr was removed to her home from Berger hospital, Sunday afternoon, where she had been a patient for five weeks. Her condition is reported good.

MCCOY VICTOR IN P. M. RACE

Democratic Leader Recommended By Congressman Arthur Lamneck.

Postmaster's Job Pays $5,500 Per Year.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 2.—Congressman Arthur F. Lamneck announced Monday that he had recommended the appointment of Nathan A. McCoy, veteran Democratic leader, as postmaster of Columbus. The recommendation is certain to be approved since Postmaster General James A. Farley, here last week, announced he would sanction Lamneck's selection.

Other candidates high in the civil service examination were Allen M. Rowe and Ralph W. Clark.

BACKED LAMNECK

McCoy was known to have the support of Governor George White. The successful applicant was one of Congressman Lamneck's most ardent supporters previous to the last campaign and is given much credit for his election. He is a native of Columbus and has been in Democratic politics for 40 years.

Mr. McCoy has served as superintendent of the street cleaning department. In 1924 he was an unsuccessful candidate for sheriff. He was a captain in the Fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry in the Spanish-American war.

Mr. McCoy had also been an active candidate for the post of superintendent of the Federal reformatory at Chillicothe.

He will assume the postmaster'ship succeeding James R. Geren as soon as the appointment is approved in Washington. The position pays about $5,500 annually. Mr. Geren is expected to have another job in the post office so he can complete his 30-year pension period next May.

STIRRING TALK DELIVERED BY OHIO OFFICIAL

John W. Bricker, Attorney General, Urges Return to Old 'Traditions'

Splendid Reception at Jones Residence

"Let virtue and intelligence be continued among the masses of the people and this American nation will endure forever..."

With this thought, John W. Bricker, attorney general of Ohio and native of Mt. Sterling, chimed an eloquent address on "American Traditions" at the 1933 meeting of the Ohio History Day Association under the auspices of the 300-year-old Logan Elm Sunday afternoon.

Threatening weather earlier in the day held the attendance to a lower figure than was expected, although it was estimated that over 1,500 persons were gathered under the old elm for the annual occasion. John W. Bricker, attorney general, presided.

Possessed of exceptional oratorical ability and a pleasing and winning personality, Mr. Bricker held his audience spell-bound with an eloquent plea for a return to the old principle of devotion to fellow man and high ideals. Speaking out clearly that the highway to the United States was prompted by the urge for better conditions, freedom and happiness on the part of the colonists; the attorney general said that the Americans of today continue to retain the determination and bravery and vigor of youth which has characterized them down through the growth of the country.

"I say like the writers of old, that if we let virtue and intelligence be continued among the masses, America will emerge from these trying times a stronger nation than ever before," Mr. Bricker concluded.

WIND CHANGES TO SAVE TOWN FROM FLAMES

Teegardin Elevator, Barn, Garage Destroyed at Duvall, Saturday

Water Poured on House-Tops by Brigade

Loss of $18,000 was sustained and a number of houses in the village of Duvall, Harrison-twp., narrowly escaped destruction Saturday afternoon when flames swept the elevator and adjoining buildings of the Teegardin Grain Co.

Some estimates placed the loss at $25,000. Most of the damage was covered by insurance.

The fire was discovered in the extreme top of the elevator at 1 p. m. by men in the office, beside the elevator. They were hurrying to the building where they were working when they saw smoke pouring through the frame but when they reached the fire had nothing with which to fight the fire. They went back to the ground for water but before they could again reach the flames they were beyond control.

Calls were sent to the local fire department and to Ashville but before either could respond the elevator was a mass of flames. Nothing in it was saved. A loss of between 9,000 and 10,000 bushels of wheat and a large quantity of timothy seed was suffered.

BARN, GARAGE LOST

A large barn north of the elevator was destroyed as was a garage.

For a while after the elevator became a furnace it was feared the town might suffer great loss. The wind was blowing from the northwest carrying the flames over the village and sparks were extinguished as they landed on several residences. Bucket brigades were organized and water was poured on house-tops to prevent flames. After a while the wind changed taking the flames from the town. Fire Chief Talmer Wise, who answered the call with the city's small pumper, said that changing wind is all that saved several and possibly a larger number of homes.

A Norfolk & Western railroad engine was detached at Ashville and taken back to Duvall to provide water with which to fight a fire which started in the coal pile. The Ashville pumper helped on this job.

WIRES DESTROYED

Wires of the Scioto Valley Power Co. were burned as were those of the Citizens Telephone Co. Both companies had crews busy in the vicinity of the flames.

As far as can be learned no one was injured in fighting the blaze. The Teegardin elevator has long been part of the county and it is expected plans will be drawn immediately to rebuild.

Local firemen extinguished a blaze caused by gasoline at the city tool-house in the rear of the engine house early Sunday.

MERRYMAKERS BUSY

The Legion merry-makers literally took charge of the World's Fair and downtown Chicago last night. A score of states held impromptu parades through hotel lobbies to the accompaniment of bands and drum corps. They had arrived in some 400 special trains which swelled the crowd to break all past convention attendance records.

Although shouting, conviviality and parading reigned, the ex-servicemen had a number of more serious activities in mind during the next few days.

COMMISSION SUED

Mrs. Ruth W. Marshall and Priscilla Ann Marshall, a minor, have filed suit in common pleas court against Phillips & Davies Inc. and the Ohio Industrial Commission as an appeal from the latter's decision in the death of the plaintiff's husband and father, Lyle E. Marshall.

Mr. Marshall, employed by the Phillips & Davies Inc. of Lima as a salesman, was killed March 24, 1930 when his automobile and a David Davies truck collided in the northern part of Pickaway-co. The petition says the Industrial Commission has refused to allow the death claim.

TRIAL SCHEDULED

Trial of the suit of Bessie Tatum against Raymond Preet is scheduled in common pleas court, Tuesday at 9 a. m., before Judge J. W. Adkins. The suit concerns parentage of the plaintiff's twins.

SALE IS ALLOWED

Judge J. W. Adkins, Monday, signed an order of sale entry in the case of Charles M. Yantes of Lancaster, against Charles W. Savage. The plaintiff, represented by J. H. Fultz, of Lancaster, asked $3,388.

SALE IS DENIED

An order of sale was refused, Monday, by Judge Adkins in the case of the Chillicothe Savings Co. against Herbert L. Gray.

CUBAN BULLET HITS AMERICAN

Man Named Lotspeich Dies As Cuban Troops, Former Officers Fight.

HAVANA, Oct. 2.—An American named George Lotspeich was shot and killed by a stray bullet today as Cuban troops and former army officers lodged in the National hotel fought a pitched battle which took a reported toll of seven lives.

Three officers and three soldiers were reported killed in the battle, while an undetermined number were injured.

Lotspeich, who was 45, was killed by a bullet which struck him in the chest while he was watching the battle from the roof of his apartment house near the National hotel.

CAUSE MYSTERY
The cause of the affray was a mystery, but reports stated the troops with or without official authorization, attempted to seize the hotel. Some 300 officers who served under former President Gerardo Machado have been 'besieged' there for weeks.

The officers shot from places of concealment near hotel windows, while guns also rattled from the protection of the Carreno building. Riot conditions prevailed about the Edificio Carreno.

In the confusion, it was impossible to obtain an accurate check of casualties.

Apparently there were no casualties among the soldiers, who boasted to have killed unnumbered officers as the battle waxed hot.

Democratic Leader Recommended By Congressman Arthur Lammek.

Postmaster's Job Pays $5,500 Per Year.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 2.—Congressman Arthur P. Lammek announced Monday that he had recommended the appointment of Nathan A. McCoy, veteran Democratic leader, as postmaster of Columbus. The recommendation is certain to be approved since Postmaster General James A. Farley, here last week, announced he would sanction Lammek's selection.

Other candidates high in the civil service examination were Allen M. Rowe and Ralph W. Clark.

McCoy was known to have the support of Governor George White.

BACKED LAMMEK
The successful applicant was one of Congressman Lammek's most ardent supporters previous to the last campaign and is given much credit for his election. He is a native of Columbus and has been in Democratic politics for 40 years.

Mr. McCoy has served as superintendent of the street cleaning department. In 1926 he was an unsuccessful candidate for sheriff. He was a captain in the Fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry in the Spanish-American war.

Mr. McCoy had also been an active candidate for the post of superintendent of the Federal reformatory at Chillicothe.

He will assume the postmaster'ship succeeding James R. Geren as soon as the appointment is approved in Washington. The position pays about $5,500 annually. Mr. Geren is expected to have another job in the post office so he can complete his 30-year pension period next May.

John W. Bricker, Attorney General, Urges Return to Old 'Traditions'

Splendid Reception Held at Jones Residence

"Let virtue and intelligence be continued among the masses of the people and this American nation will endure forever..."

With this thought, John W. Bricker, attorney general of Ohio and native of Mt. Sterling, climaxed an eloquent address on "American Traditions" at the 1933 meeting of the Ohio History Day Association under the auspicious branches of the 300-year-old Logan Elm Sunday afternoon.

Threatening weather earlier in the day held the attendance to a lower figure than was expected, although it was estimated that over 1,500 persons were gathered under the old elm for the annual exercises. John W. Carlisle, Columbus, vice-president of the Ohio History Day association, presided.

Possessed of exceptional oratorical ability and a pleasing and winning personality, Mr. Bricker held his audience spell-bound with an eloquent plea for a return to the old principle of devotion to fellow man and high ideals. Pointing out clearly that the beginning of

Mrs. Howard Jones declared, Sunday, that the History Day celebration has been held at Logan Elm for 21 consecutive years and inclement weather has never stopped the proceedings.

The United States was prompted by the urge for better conditions, freedom and happiness on the part of the colonists; the attorney general said that the Americans of today continue to retain the determination and bravery and vigor of youth which has characterized them down through the growth of the country.

"LET VIRTUE LEAD"
"I say like the writer of old, that if we let virtue and intelligence be continued among the masses, America will emerge from these trying times a stronger nation than ever before," Mr. Bricker concluded.

IOWA BEATS 'CATS'

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—The Western Conference, with the possible exception of Northwestern, today called Iowa university's first winning bid for football championship honors since the Hawkeyes were dealt a body blow some three years back and were ruled out of the Big Ten.

That Iowa is a serious contender for top honors was recognized by the best minds in the Big Ten after the fast, heavy and driving Hawkeyes defeated Northwestern here Saturday, 7 to 0, threatening at times to make it even more decisive.

Iowa's schedule favors the title hopes. Bradley is their opponent Saturday and no game is scheduled Oct. 14. The Hawkeyes meet Wisconsin on Oct. 21.

Little World Series. The score was 7-4.

Lee walked 10 men and gave up five hits in six and two-thirds innings before he was derailed in favor of Lefty Heise who was also picked for runs, which, however, proved superfluous.

Lee's wildness helped Buffalo to two runs in the first and they scored one in each the second and third. Lee forced a run over the plate in the seventh before Heise came to the mound.

Buffalo outhit the Birds only 8 to 7 but their blows came at more timely intervals.

Rothrock and Delancey hit homers for the Red Birds and Mulleavy smacked one for the Buffalo team.

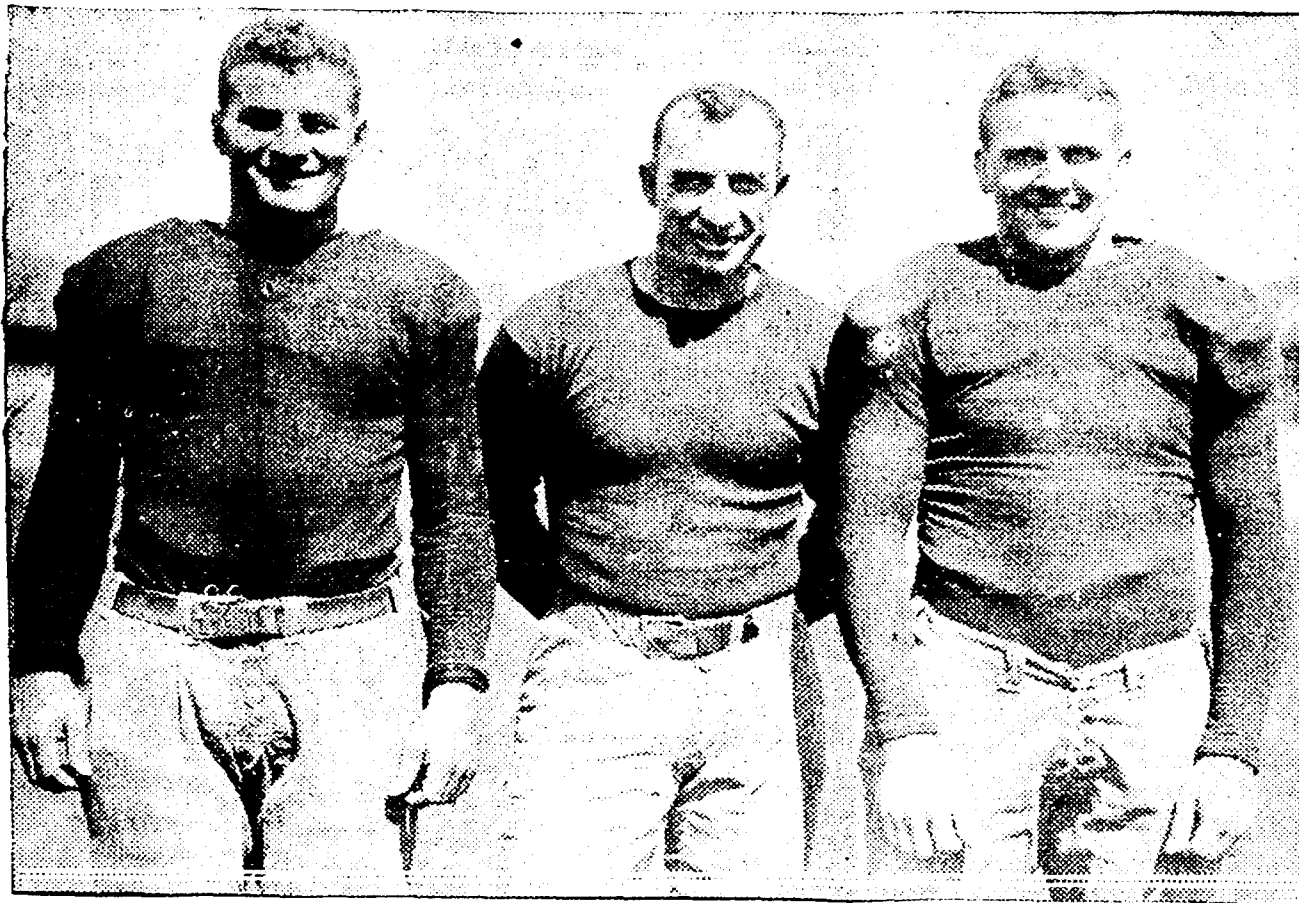

Charlie Perkins was the winning pitcher.

The Buffalo team has regained much confidence since returning to its home grounds and will be plenty tough from now on. Paul Dean is expected to ascend the mound this evening with Phil Galtivan opposing him.

Not until Ford comes in will NRA be hitting on all cylinders.

Bettors Favoring Senators As Series Approaches

New York, However, Is Given Edge in First Game With Carl Hubbell to Take Hill; Earl Whitehill Favored For Cronin's Team.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Having proceeded quietly and with a deceptive composure to this point, events suddenly gathered momentum this morning and came on with a rush as the World Series of 1933 went into the final twenty-four hours of waiting before action takes charge. Both of the principals, namely, the New York Giants and Washington Senators, will go through the gestures of a final workout early today. Even earlier, the Giants' mid-town office will throw open its doors to a special sale for the cut-rate clients in an effort to "move" the 8,000 seats in the lower stand, remaining unsold for the opening game tomorrow.

The sale which will abandon the old three-game racket in favor of the single game purchase, opened at nine o'clock.

At that hour, there had been no change in the betting, which continued to favor the Senators for the series and the Giants for the first game. There was also no change in the short but resolute line of vigilantes facing the locked and silent gates. Only the weather, in fact, had something new to offer. It had turned sharp and brisk overnight, with more than a hint that these conditions might continue through the opening game.

Some felt that the fall in temperature might prove a sell-out tomorrow; others, that the Giants' decision to sell the rest of their tickets on a day to day basis will close the doors at game time.

Either way, the management figured to do itself pretty proud. If there are any noticeable gaps in the crowd tomorrow, the burden may fall upon Broadway's ticket brokers who have acquired some choice locations and are holding same for a minimum of $20 a pair.

FAVOR WHITEHILL

Mr. Joe Cronin, the boy manager and non-confider, hasn't declared himself on his pitcher and won't, but the general understanding seems to be that Whitehill is his man. On the other hand, Mr. Will Terry, the boy manager and speaker-outter, has long since indicated that he is sticking with Carl Hubbell, which is as it should be. In this respect, Mr. Hubbell is just another roll of adhesive tape. I mean he's the kid that will stick with you.

He's also the answer to the fact that the Giants rule four to five for the opening game while being no better than ten to seven for the series. The sharpshooters simply figure Hubbell's screw-ball to beat the Senators the first time out, after which the latter's punch is expected to carry it through the rest of the way.

As one man put the matter, it seems to be a case of "Beat Hubbell and take the pot." He didn't add, "don't and you won't." But that may be the payoff.

Emerson, Keisling Tangle; Presnell's Point After Touchdown Is Edge.

Free swinging featured the National Professional football league game, Sunday, at Portsmouth when the Chicago Cardinals went down to a 7-6 defeat.

Several bouts took place in the stands during the tray but the big fight came on the field when Ox Emerson, guard from Texas on the Portsmouth team, and Keisling, Chicago tackle, mixed.

The crowd surged on the field but police stopped the battle before any damage was done. The game resumed.

The Spartans scored first taking advantage of a break. Joe Lillard, Oregon negro star, kicked short late in the first period and Portsmouth took the ball back to the 25 yard line. Fourteen yards were gained before the period ended then on the first play of the second quarter, Cadell, former Stanford halfback, skirted his left end for the touchdown.

Presnell's placement, which proved the margin, was good.

LILLARD IS STAR

Chicago scored in the same period as the result of a 50 yard pass from Lillard to Tipton who ran 10 more yards for the touchdown. Lillard's dropkick failed.

Both teams threatened several times to score in the second half but goal line stands by both defenses prevented additional touchdowns.

The Spartans now go on the road, meeting Green Bay, Boston, Philadelphia, Patterson, Brooklyn, Staten Island and the New York Giants before returning to tangle with Green Bay in Portsmouth on Nov. 12.

A place kick in the first period by Ken Strong proved the margin of victory Sunday as the New York Giants defeated Green Bay, 10-7 at Milwaukee. Newman and Strong featured the contest.

Chicago Bears also turned back Boston, Sunday, 7-0.

BISHOPS PREPARE FOR DAYTON GAME

Team Looks Good Against Heidelberg, Scoring Three In Second Half.

DELAWARE, Oct. 2.—With Pape, guard and captain, on the injured list after a gruelling Heidelberg game, Saturday, Coach George Gauthier's Bishops went into training today for another game that is expected to be tough at Dayton against the Fliers Friday night.

The Bishops were victorious, 28-7, against the Student Princes but the first half was hard-fought with the score being 7-7 at its conclusion.

"Doc" Wertz, Delaware halfback, was the feature of the game, doing everything to perfection. John Turley, who did all the pass tossing, and Harry Barber, a tackle, also starred with Howard White, who had to cross the goal-line three times before a single touchdown counted. White spent part of the first period on the bench then entered the game to immediately make a substantial gain.

In the second half he dashed 15 yards for a touchdown only to be called back for offense. He again scored but was called back and on the third attempt he crashed through the Heidelberg line for the goal. He also made several nice gains to put the Bishops in scoring position and his punting was a feature.

After the Dayton game, the Wesleyan team goes to Syracuse and then to Athens to meet Ohio university's highly-touted Bobcats.

STRIBLING SERIOUS

MACON, Ga., Oct. 2.—His colorful ring career ended by a tragic motor crash that necessitated amputation of a foot, W. L. (Young) Stribling, one-time contender for the heavyweight boxing championship, lay in critical condition today at Macon hospital.

Stribling's left foot was almost completely torn off when an automobile collided with the motorcycle he was riding.

Stribling likewise suffered a fractured hip. X-ray pictures today were to show whether the pelvic bone also was crushed.

"The patient is in a very serious condition," explained Dr. Rozar, "and the second amputation cannot be performed until his condition takes a turn for the better."

Both teams threatened several times to score in the second half but goal line stands by both defenses prevented additional touchdowns.

The Spartans now go on the road meeting Green Bay, Boston, Philadelphia, Patterson, Brooklyn, Staten Island and the New York Giants before returning to tangle with Green Bay in Portsmouth on Nov. 12.

A place kick in the first period by Ken Strong proved the margin of victory Sunday as the New York Giants defeated Green Bay, 10-7 at Milwaukee. Newman and Strong featured the contest.

Chicago Bears also turned back Boston, Sunday, 7-0.

Not Illegal to Melt Coins

It is not illegal to melt or otherwise mutilate coins, but it is illegal to attempt to pass mutilated coins as money. It is not illegal to burn or otherwise destroy paper money. The government would gain by such an act, as those notes could not then be presented for redemption. —Pathfinder Magazine.

BISHOPS PREPARE FOR DAYTON GAME

Team Looks Good Against Heidelberg, Scoring Three In Second Half.

DELAWARE, Oct. 2.—With Pape, guard and captain, on the injured list after a gruelling Heidelberg game, Saturday, Coach George Gauthier's Bishops went into training today for another game that is expected to be tough at Dayton against the Fliers Friday night.

The Bishops were victorious, 28-7, against the Student Princes but the first half was hard-fought with the score being 7-7 at its conclusion. "Doc" Wertz, Delaware halfback, was the feature of the game, doing everything to perfection. John Turley, who did all the pass tossing, and Harry Barber, a tackle, also starred with Howard White, who had to cross the goal-line three times before a single touchdown counted. White spent part of the first period on the bench then entered the game to immediately make a substantial gain.

In the second half he dashed 15 yards for a touchdown only to be called back for offside. He again scored but was called back and on the third attempt he crashed through the Heidelberg line for the goal. He also made several nice gains to put the Bishops in scoring position and his punting was a feature.

After the Dayton game, the Wesleyan team goes to Syracuse and then to Athens to meet Ohio university's highly-touted Bobcats.

Breakfast Foods Are Popular

New ideas, when worthwhile and put forward with persistent effort, always pay handsome dividends, as evidenced in the fact that cereal breakfast foods not so long ago were unknown. Now they have become universal dishes, and production has climbed to more than $100,000,000 annually.

STRIBLING SERIOUS

MACON, Ga., Oct. 2.—His colorful ring career ended by a tragic motor crash that necessitated amputation of a foot, W. L. (Young) Stribling, one-time contender for the heavyweight boxing championship, lay in critical condition today at Macon hospital.

Stribling's left foot was almost completely torn off when an automobile collided with the motorcycle he was riding.

Stribling likewise suffered a fractured hip. X-ray pictures today were to show whether the pelvic bone also was crushed.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK STRIKES WEST COAST

Little Damage Believed Done In California Early Monday.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 2.—A sharp earthquake shook the Los Angeles area and most of Southern California at 1:10 a. m. today. Early reports indicated the center of the shock was near the Metropolitan area of Los Angeles, although the shock was felt nearly as far south as San Diego and as far north as Ventura.

Outside the Los Angeles area the shock was described as of medium or slight intensity.

In Long Beach, center of the earthquake of March 10, the shock was felt sharply but with no reported damage.

The tremor was felt with varying intensity in the Los Angeles area, being described in the downtown district as quite sharp while in other sections as less severe.

DAMAGE SLIGHT
Early reports indicated damage was confined to some broken glass and broken plaster.

The shock woke all except extremely heavy sleepers and some left their homes and apartments. In downtown Los Angeles a number of persons, mainly late pedestrians congregated in Pershing square.

There was no interruption of telephone service although phone offices were flooded with calls immediately after the shock.

Although of sharp jolting motion, the tremor was of short duration, some estimates placing it at only two seconds.

Hawthorne, Compton, San Pedro, Anaheim, Huntington park and other towns reported feeling the disturbance in addition to Long Beach in the Los Angeles area.

GOES TO NORTH

Further north Newhall felt it distinctly while to the south San Bernardino residents were disturbed.

The sheriff's office reported considerable glass had been broken at Belvedere garden, in East Los Angeles.

The shock was not felt at San Diego.

Seismologists at once started to check to determine the exact center. They were not at once able to determine this as only a portion of their records were available but the shock was described as "moderately" strong at the Carnegie seismological laboratory in Pasadena.

The shock was estimated there as about three or four seconds in duration, although the record continued to write its story of the tremor on the delicate instruments for some time after the shock.

Questions and Answers

Are paper napkins or small napkins laid on the lap folded in halves or may they be opened out?

The linen napkin of dinner size, or luncheon or breakfast size is usually only half unfolded since this is more convenient for the user. Very small tea napkins, or still smaller cocktail napkins are always unfolded to their utmost extent, and frequently are passed without being folded. Paper napkins are not usually mentioned in books of etiquette but fine linen finish ones may be treated as though fabric and left folded in the middle.

How should the cup be held when tea is poured, serving formally or informally?

A tea is the least formal of all meals and there are no hard and fast rules to be followed since everyone observes the degree of formality that suits her scale of entertaining best. If the teapot is large and heavy, it will be easier to take the cup to the pot than to carry the pot to the cup. If the pot is small, light and easily manipulated, it is better to leave the cup on the tray and pour into it. This is not quite so easy and runs the risk of being less graceful. If the tea comes from the samovar, the cup is held under the spout, quite naturally, but one thing is very important—the cup should not be touched unnecessarily by the fingers of the pourer.

I have heard of using tapioca as a base for ice cream. Is it successful, and in what proportions is it used?

A vanilla ice cream recipe will show how tapioca can be used:

- 3 Tbsp. minute tapioca 1/4 tsp. salt
- 2 C. milk, scalded 1/4 C. sugar
- 3 Tbsp. light corn syrup 2 Tbsp. sugar
- 1 C. cream whipped 2 egg whites
- 1 Tbsp. vanilla

Add tapioca to milk, and cook in a double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear and mixture thickened, stirring frequently. Strain hot mixture, stirring through a very fine sieve, onto salt, sugar and corn syrup. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Cool. Add 2 tablespoons sugar to egg whites and beat until stiff. Fold into cold tapioca mixture. Fold in cream and vanilla. Turn into freezing tray of an automatic refrigerator and freeze as rapidly as possible, three to four hours usually are required. This recipe makes 1 quart of ice cream and is considered quite successful.

Delicious Grape Juice

The trick in making this delicious grape juice that stays sweet, lies in the procedure. By following the directions closely and preparing the syrup for one can at a time, the canned juice retains the grape flavor and will keep indefinitely. The proportion to use is one cup of grapes and one cup of sugar for each quart jar.

Put the washed grapes, pulled from their stems into a measuring cup. Place the sterilized jar in a pan of hot water and add the grapes. Make the syrup with one cup of sugar and sufficient water to fill the jar. Boil the sugar and water until there is a thin syrup, pour over the grapes and seal the jar immediately with lids and rubbers that have been sterilized. Allowing it to stand, improves the flavor. More Speed Asked

THE call again has gone out from Washington to states and cities wanting federal funds for public works to hurry their plans. It comes this time from the President himself. The administrator of the public works fund, Secretary Ickes, previously had appealed for greater speed, and considerable red tape had been cut to permit this.

Less than $2,000,000,000 of the $3,300,000,000 available for public works projects has been allocated. It is not often that special efforts have to be made to give away money. Prospective recipients usually need no urging to take their place in line.

With winter almost here, it is especially desirable that work be given to as large numbers of unemployed as possible. This is emphasized by the president in his appeal to mayors meeting in Chicago to hurry forward their plans. He promised that the latter would be acted upon "with a minimum of delay" by officials in Washington. "We will match speed with you," he said. "The money is available, and we want to put men to work." Certain safeguards have to be observed in allocating the money, to prevent waste and graft. These appear, though, to have been reduced to a minimum, and the administration is anxious that projects encounter as little delay as possible.

The need is immediate. The money is ready. No further appeal from Washington authorities should be necessary to spur officials to action.

Easy way to locate swindlers: Just levy a special tax on them and listen for the customary howl.

Wiping Out Postal Deficit

EVEN those who chafe under relatively high postal rates will give Postmaster General Farley credit for the efficient administration of postal affairs, which has already resulted in the reduction of the postoffice deficit from nearly $10,000,000 a month to $1500 a month.

He has accomplished this apparent miracle early in his administration and in spite of reduced rates for some classes of mail. Nor is the shrinking of the deficit to be attributed alone to improved business conditions, particularly in view of the fact that some of the largest deficits occurred at the peak of the prosperity period.

Uncle Sam's mail is operating on nearly self-sustaining basis for the first time in many years because of personnel reductions, salary cuts, consolidation of rural routes, curtailment of airmail and steamship subsidies and other economies.

Some of the postal-rate increases which went into effect before Mr. Farley took over the management of the mails have helped him while others have hindered him in his battle against the deficit. The recent return of the drop-letter rate to two cents has helped to win back a vast volume of mail lost when the Hoover administration boosted the rate from one cent to three cents.

That which the people had long been led to believe was impossible is now shown to be easily possible. Where there's a will there's usually a way.

If instead of lending money to Russia to buy American cotton the government would give it direct and string-free to the planters, it would avoid the expense of book-keeping.

The hard job is to make the world lose faith in a dollar that is good enough to survive without faith.

All of life is like that. Once you find you can grow a mustache, you no longer want the darned thing.

Judging only by results, it is a prison offense to trim a trusting public if you get less than a million.

Science tells us that hair continues to grow after death. So, far that matter, do heirs.

"STOLEN LOVE"

CHAPTER XLVII

And then, when Joan had almost decided that Curtis loathed the very pile of wedding invitations waiting in their snug, rich envelopes to be addressed, when she was sure he had lost all interest in her, so absorbed was he in his own thoughts, then as if suddenly conscious of her he would seize her suddenly and passionately in his arms. Coddling her face with burning, almost brutal kisses, until she would shrink from him fearfully, hating herself for her fears. . . . "It is because I do not love him. . . . Oh, Curtis! Curtis! Have I still cheated you?"

So she submitted to his caresses, endured his long, brooding silences, his unreasonable bursts of anger, his sharp, harsh words.

"I have done him suffer enough. . . . I've done everything wrong, everything. . . . spoil my own life. . . . now the least I can do is not spoil his."

And there came over her the longing to see the hills again, the green and gold hills of Marin, with the madrones with their tan, peeling bark, and the evergreens, and the spicy smells. To go back to the old house, and see the eucalyptus trees, and the rose garden, and yes. . . . Aunt Evvie, too. . . .

The little Italian who sold flowers near Francine's shop had but-tercup to sell, a rusty tin pail of them on the lowest shelf of the stand. They looked up at Joan as she passed, with their shining yellow faces drooping just a little like children who are tired. "Oh, I want them!" she cried, and took them home, to bury her face in their freshness, and smell the green, springy smell.

And her eyes were misty when she put them down, because they were wild flowers, they might have come from the hills of Marin. She was homesick, homesick for the sweet rolling hills and the green waters of the bay with the small boats anchored there, bobbing gently up and down.

"It's spring fever—that's what it is the matter with me," she thought. "If I can get away—just for an hour or two—all alone—I'll be all right again."

For she couldn't be alone in Maisie's house. There was always Maisie, loving and kind. "Joan, can't you read in the living room just as well?" I kinda hate to sit alone—" Joan, I notice you had your door shut, but won't you leave it open, honey, I never have been one to like a shut door."

And in the shop there were the girls. And in the evenings Curtis, always Curtis. Curtis with his long, brooding silences, his sudden, fierce embraces, his sharp, cutting tongue. It was because he was tired, poor Curtis, he worked so hard. The week end at the cabin would rest him a bit. He would be the old Curtis again after that, gentle and kind. . . . but she couldn't wait for his house party. . . . she had to get away for an hour or two now. . . . feel the soft grass of the hills under her feet, the salt breeze on her cheek. . . .

On Sunday, very early, long before Maisie was stirring, Joan slipped out of the house, into the morning sunshine. A steady car, coasting down the hill, stopped with a screaming of brakes, and she climbed aboard, her heart beating fast, because she was going home—home to the hills—all alone.

At the Ferry Building she hesitated a moment, a little dazed. Here was life, and youth, and eager waiting. Young boys with ukuleles under their arms, and knapsacks on their backs. Waiting, bareheaded, anxiously searching the milling crowd, trying to locate The Girl in the sea of girls about them.

Some of the bright-eyed young girls in hiking pants. Some of them smart and neat in high boots and sweaters, some of them shoddy in old finery. Run over heels, sleazy silk stockings, big pearl chokers, boys' caps pulled over marcelled locks. Gay, all of them, eager, laughing.

Joan felt drab and elderly, sitting all alone in her corner of the boat, listening to the girls and boys crowding all about her, shouting to each other, dropping coats and lunch boxes almost on her toes. "Was I ever as young as that?" she wondered. Joan, who wasn't twenty.

Bells rang, the engines stopped, the fat ferry bumped slowly into the slip. "Save a seat for me!" "Which is our train?" "Oh Gawd, Elsie's gone and left the uke on the boat!" Running, and laughter and noise. Whistles and bells, and the neat rows of waiting trains disappearing down the long, thin tracks.

Sausalito quiet and sleepy then, and the sea and the hills calling. All the hikers gone on into the country in the trains. Just the big ferry squeaking at its moorings, a few early yachtsmen unfurling sails.

Home! Home again, with the wind blowing from the bay and the sun shining, and the hills sweet with spring! Here was the shack where old Captain Horner kept his boats. "Bait for Sale!" His old sign, that he had painted himself, slanting down hill—and he dead these many months.

Here was the trail, the short-cut to the high road. No one had been over it lately. Some small pink flowers had sprung up there. A spider had made a web. . . .

She climbed on, breathlessly, holding her aching side.

She could see the hedge of the old house, and the turrets rising above it. The lilacs would be in bloom now. . . . "Oh, why did I come, why did I come?"

High up on the hill she sat down in the grass to rest. But she couldn't rest, it was a mistake to come here, there was no rest for her now. It was all haunted. Haunted by Bill. . . .

Here they had found the biggest poppies, there they had sat to watch the ferry, far below, coming into the bay. Every blade of grass, every flowering shrub, every whisper of the wind spoke of him. . . . "Do you remember. . . . Joan, do you remember?"

She covered her face with her hands. "Can I ever forget?"

In the city, with all the hurry and secret city life, with things moving so swiftly, and people so close, you could push unwelcome thoughts away. You could fool yourself, and the others. . . .

But here, all alone, in the soft wind, and the sun, with the great expanse of the bay spread out below, and the blue expanse overhead, here you couldn't fool yourself. . . . not any more. . . .

"I've done everything wrong," she thought miserably. "Everything. . . . Everything seemed so clear now, everything that had been murky and dim before. She could see it all, all the mistakes, piled one on the other.

She had loved Bill. Would always love him. She knew that now. Coming back to the hills, without him made her see things clearly—so terribly plain—too late. It wasn't spring fever that had made her come. It wasn't nostalgia for the place that had been home. It was the old hunger to revisit the places where they had been together, to drag again the old dreams, that would never come true.

She looked down at Curtis' ring, and the great flawless stone blinked back at her, blankly.

"I'm going to marry someone I don't love," she thought, "and it's too late to back out now. I have so much to make up to him. I've cheated him so. Oh, Curtis. . . . why didn't I see it would be just another mistake, why didn't I see—before?"

After a while she stood up and brushed the grass and the small clinging burrs from her skirt. Carefully she straightened her hat, powdered her nose. It was time to go back—to Curtis.

She picked her way down the steep path, turning her face away to avoid seeing the sun-blistered house in the hollow, the house where Bill's mother lived. She couldn't help it if she still loved Bill. That was her hard luck. But she could keep from thinking about him—and she would. She must be loyal to Curtis. . . . be good to him. . . . make up to him. . . . for everything. . . .

On down the path. . . . Now the bend of the road shut off the view of Aunt Evvie's hedge, behind which were the lilacs, the wet, purple lilacs. . . . the scent of them came to her on the wind. . . . "Do you remember. . . . do you remember?"

She ran the rest of the way to the boat.

Curtis' plans were almost ready. His mind was made up. Sleepless nights, days of indecision. . . . couldn't go on that way. Every day brought the wedding nearer, the wedding that couldn't be. He must break the news to his mother, soon. She would be very angry. Take to her bed probably, and have one of those confounded nervous attacks.

After all, you couldn't blame her, it would be embarrassing for all concerned. Still there wouldn't be the first engagement to be broken at the last moment. She'd get over it. Be glad enough to have him to herself again. He might even take her to Europe for a few months, she had always wanted that.

And Joan. . . . what about Joan? "There I go again," he thought miserably, "making a fool of myself over her. A lot she has worried about my happiness! She can take care of herself—she's had experience enough. . . . Oh, Johnnie, Johnnie—to think of what might have been!"

The wealthy Dutchman who had served as meal ticket and entertainment committee all winter had gone East in the spring, and for once in her life Ruth Gillespie was without "a boy friend." Of course, there was Rollo Keyes, bombarding her with letters, and slightly stale chocolates from the South—but he was too far away to count.

She was on her way home, feeling "low in her mind" in spite of the new black satin outfit that had cost five weeks' salary, and made her look like a Baron de Meyer photograph, when someone called her name—"Ruth!"

She wheeled sharply. "Great Scott—Willum—where did you drop from?"

"You sure don't look it. Dear old London, or little old New York's more like it. Stand still and let me look at you. If it isn't good just to do that. Say, if you aren't the lemon doing the disappearing act that way, though—and me crying my eyes out, thinking you didn't love me any more!"

She looked into his eyes, and laughed, her charming bubbling laugh. The little dimple near her mouth quivered, her round brown eyes danced with merriment.

He grinned, and took her arm—"Come on to a beanyery. I've been waiting on the corner, watching your darned old millinery window for an hour. Thought you'd never shut up shop. If that isn't a sign of love, on the part of a hungry man."

"Waiting for me—or Joan?" she asked quickly, and could have bit her tongue off the next moment. Fool. To remind him—"Joan—is she still working?"

"Some might call it that." But he looked so cold and strained she added quickly, "Oh you know what I mean—she's Madeline. Every day she comes any old time. That's how you've missed her. Say—how long have you been waiting outside for Joan, passing me up, eh?"

"Not very long," he said. "Care where we eat? Is a grill all right? Let's go to one of those places where they have booths. I want to talk to you—Gosh, it's been a long time."

"Yes, I know what you want to talk about," she thought, reading his still boyish face, his candid blue eyes. "Joan!" And she answered, "Anywhere at all. Willum, honey—here, at Fred's will do."

At dinner she chattered for a little while, cleverly putting him at his ease again. Gay, friendly Ruth! But over the coffee and cigarettes he came back to the thing that was on his mind, the thing he had come to ask. "I understand Joan is going to be married soon."

"Oh yes—they're making quite a fuss about it. Pictures in the papers and what not. It seems our Johnnie is some kind of big potato herself."

"She's a Van Fleet," he said, absently. "Aha—so you know all about Joan!"

THE MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

With "scoop" as a business tenet and "love 'em and leave 'em" as a romantic code, a newsreel photographer is interestingly depicted in "Headline Shooter" by William Gargan in the RKO-Radio Picture with Frances Dee coming to the Cliftona Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

Gargan's views jibed with the news-hawks' credo: "It's crazy to settle down with one woman." Accordingly, he sneered at marriage contemptuously until his work crossed demure Frances Dee, a newspaper sob sister in "Headline Shooter."

Gargan steers right on the inside track to her heart when the detour looms up in her fiancé. Undiscouraged he pursues his romancing with the girl as they "cover" fire, flood, earthquake and murder. When their lots are thrown together in a notorious gang massacre, with death imminent, Frances makes an unusual decision between fiancé and cameraman.

Gargan and Miss Dee head the cast of "Headline Shooter," in which Ralph Bellamy, Gregory Ratoff, Wallace Ford and Jack LaRue are also cast under Otto Brower's direction.

AT THE GRAND

Combining the glamor of star personalities with a strong human interest story of universal appeal, Fox Film's long heralded "State Fair" sets a new high standard in motion picture entertainment.

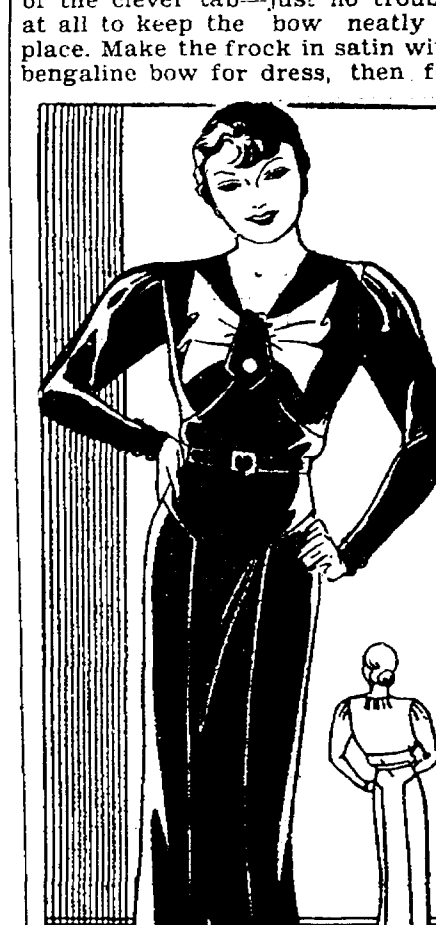

The production, which opened last night at the Grand Theatre, is an example of what intelligent story selection and perfect casting can accomplish. Such an array of stars as Janet Gaynor, Will Rogers, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory could scarcely fail to provide outstanding entertainment.

When those players are presented in a story as rich in romance, comedy and plot interest as "State Fair" the result is nothing less than a delight. Each star lends color and conviction to the type of role in which he or she excels, and all of these characterizations are woven around an absorbing drama of every day people.

TWO professional confidence-men made the acquaintance of a wealthy sportsman. He admired their sprightliness while privately deploring their vocation.

When the acquaintance had ripened into friendship he invited them to shoot in his private preserve. Before daylight they were paddled out in a skiff and put in a blind which, the night before, had been stocked with wooden decoys. There the guide left them, for the time being.

As the dawn began to break, one of the pair suddenly was aware of the wooden birds bubbling about in front of him. The light was poor and he was green at the duck-shooting game. He arose and fired both barrels of his gun into the flock. His partner straightened up, took one look and cried out in distress: "My God! You're shootin' the boosters!" Sausalito quiet and sleepy then, and the sea and the hills calling. All the hikers gone on into the country in the trains. Just the big ferry squeaking at its moorings, a few early yachtsmen unfurling sails.

Home! Home again, with the wind blowing from the bay, and the sun shining, and the hills sweet with spring! Here was the shack where old Captain Horner kept his boats. "Bait for Sale!" His old sign, that he had painted himself, slanting down hill—and he dead these many months.

Here was the trail, the short-cut to the high road. No one had been over it lately. Some small pink flowers had sprung up there. A spider had made a web. . . . She climbed on, breathlessly, holding her aching side.

She could see the hedge of the old house, and the turrets rising above it. The lilacs would be in bloom now. . . . "Oh, why did I come, why did I come?"

High up on the hill she sat down in the grass to rest. But she couldn't rest. It was a mistake to come here, there was no rest for her now. It was all haunted. Haunted by Bill. . . .

Here they had found the biggest poppies, there they had sat to watch the ferry, far below, coming into the slip. Every blade of grass, every flowering shrub, every whisper of the wind spoke of him. . . . "Do you remember. . . . Joan, do you remember?"

She covered her face with her hands. "Can I ever forget?"

In the city, with all the hurry and scurry of city life, with things moving so swiftly, and people so close, you could push unwelcome thoughts away. You could fool yourself, and the others. . . .

But here, all alone, in the salt wind, and the sun, with the great expanse of the bay spread out below, and the blue sky overhead, here you couldn't fool yourself. . . . not any more. . . .

"I've done everything wrong," she thought miserably. "Everything!"

Everything seemed so clear now, everything that had been blurred and dim before. She could see it all, the mistakes, piled one on the other. She had loved Bill. Would always love him. She knew that now. Coming back to the hills, without him made her see—so clearly—so terribly plain—too late. It wasn't spring fever that had made her come. It wasn't nostalgia for the place that had been home. It was the old hunger to revisit the places where they had been together, to dream again the old dreams, that would never come true.

She looked down at Curtis' ring, and the great flawless stone blinked back at her, blankly.

"I'm going to marry someone I don't love," she thought, "and it is too late to back out now. I have so much to make up to him. I've cheated him so. . . . Oh, Curtis. . . . why didn't I see it would be just another mistake, why didn't I see—before?"

After a while she stood up and brushed the grass and the small clinging burrs from her skirt. Carefully she straightened her hat, powdered her nose. It was time to go back—to Curtis.

She picked her way down the steep path, turning her face away to avoid seeing the sun-battered house in the hollow, the house where Bill's mother lived. She couldn't help it if she still loved Bill. That was her hard luck. But she could keep from thinking about him—and she would. She must be loyal to Curtis. . . . be good to him. . . . make up to him. . . . for everything. . . .

She ran the rest of the way to the boat.

Laughing Around the World

With IRVIN S. COBB

An Attack on the Affiliated Talent

By IRVIN S. COBB

TWO professional confidence-men made the acquaintance of a wealthy sportsman. He admired their sprightliness while privately deploring their vocation.

When the acquaintance had ripened into friendship he invited them to shoot in his private preserve. Before daylight they were paddled out in a skiff and put in a blind which, the night before, had been stocked with wooden decoys. There the guide left them, for the time being.

As the dawn began to break, one of the pair suddenly was aware of the wooden birds bobbing about in front of him. The light was poor and he was green at the duck-hoofing game. He arose and fired both barrels of his gun into the flock. His partner straightened up, took one look and cried out in distress: "My God! You're shootin' the boosters!"

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

With "scoop" as a business tenet and "love 'em and leave 'em" as a romantic code, a newsreel photographer is interestingly depicted in "Headline Shooter" by William Gargan in the RKO-Radio Picture with Frances Dee coming to the Cliftona Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

Gargan's views jibed with the news-hawks' credo: "It's crazy to settle down with one woman." Accordingly, he sneered at marriage contemptuously until his work crossed demure Frances Dee, a newspaper sob sister in "Headline Shooter."

Gargan steers right on the inside track to her heart when the detour looms up in her fiancé. Undiscouraged he pursues his romance with the girl as they "cover" fire, flood, earthquake and murder. When their lots are thrown together in a notorious gang massacre, with death imminent, Frances makes an unusual decision between fiancé and cameraman.

Gargan and Miss Dee head the cast of "Headline Shooter," in which Ralph Bellamy, Gregory Ratoff, Wallace Ford and Jack LaRue are also cast under Otto Brower's direction.

AT THE GRAND

Combining the glamor of star personalities with a strong human interest story of universal appeal, Fox Film's long heralded "State Fair" sets a new high standard in motion picture entertainment.

The production, which opened last night at the Grand Theatre, is an example of what intelligent story selection and perfect casting can accomplish. Such an array of stars as Janet Gaynor, Will Rogers, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory could scarcely fail to provide outstanding entertainment. When those players are presented in a story as rich in romance, comedy and plot interest as "State Fair" the result is nothing less than a delight. Each star lends color and conviction to the type of role in which he or she excels, and all of these characterizations are woven around an absorbing drama of every day people.

"You sure don't look it. Dear old London, or little old N' York's more like it. Stand still and let me look at you. If it isn't good just to do that. Say, if you aren't the lemon doing the disappearing act that way, though—and me crying my eyes out, thinking you didn't love me any more!"

She wheeled sharply. "Great Scott—Willum—where did you drop from?"

"Texas!"

"You sure don't look it. Dear old London, or little old N' York's more like it. Stand still and let me look at you. If it isn't good just to do that. Say, if you aren't the lemon doing the disappearing act that way, though—and me crying my eyes out, thinking you didn't love me any more!"

He grinned, and took her arm—"Come on to a beanery. I've been waiting on the corner, watching your darned old millinery window for an hour. Thought you'd never shut up shop. If that isn't a sign of love, on the part of a hungry man—"

"Waiting for me—or Joan?" she asked quickly, and could have bit her tongue off the next moment. Fool. To remind him—

"Joan is she still working?"

"Some might call it that."

But he looked so cold and strained she added quickly, "Oh you know what I mean—she's Madame's pet—goes home any old time. That's how you've missed her. Say—how long have you been waiting outside for Joan, passing me up, eh?"

"Not very long," he said. "Care where we eat? Is a grill all right? Let's go to one of those places where they have booths, I want to talk to you—Gosh, it's been a long time."

"Yes, I know what you want to talk about," she thought, reading his still boyish face, his candid blue eyes. "Joan!" And she answered, "Anywhere at all, Willum, honey—here, at Fred's will do."

At dinner she chattered for a little while, cleverly putting him at his ease again. Gay, friendly Ruth! But over the coffee and cigarettes he came back to the thing that was on his mind, the thing he had come to ask. "I understand Joan is going to be married soon."

"Oh yes—they're making quite a fuss about it. Pictures in the papers and what not. It seems our Joannie is some kind of big potatoes herself."

"She's a Van Fleet," he said, absently.

"Aha—so you know all about Joan!"

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

In his soft Georgia drawl, he began his first story. It was a treatise on "fast thinking"—an implied compliment to young Mr. Joseph Cronin, the youth who led the Griffs to victory. Roberts said: "I reminds me of the story of the darky down in Gaw-gah." As the narrative waxed fast, somebody yelled from the audience. "Hey! You're on the air!" "Don't kid yo'self," was Mr. Roberts' pert rejoinder. "This is just a family party. We all aren't on the air!"

A goose-pimply radio audience, however, strained its ears, to catch further morsels. "And Ah am also reminded of a story," continued the irrepressible Mr. Roberts, "of the old darky who married a very young wife." This time the radio went dead. "And I want to tell you all another story," Mr. Roberts went on, "about the colored center-fielder who had to chase a sure home run into the tall grass. Well, when he got theah—"

Once again the radio went dead. This time it did not resume until a new speaker was addressing the Victory banquet.

STIRRING TALK

remarked at the beginning of his talk that he had been warned not to talk politics. "Well, I'll overlook that subject today because I realize I'm in alien territory," he said.

Preceding Mr. Bricker's address, Mrs. Howard Jones, president of the Ohio History Day Association and a tireless worker in the organization since its beginning twenty years ago, was introduced by Mr. Carlisle and gave an interesting resume of past meetings, listing the speakers which have appeared on the programs. Mrs. Jones bitterly arraigned the white man's civilization for the sad plight which befell Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance, a pure-blood member of the Blackfoot tribe, who appeared on the History Day program several years ago and who recently committed suicide. "Chief Long Lance was attempting to live the white man's life and became entangled in fast company while in Hollywood, and becoming discouraged, took his own life," Mrs. Jones said.

"The evils of the white man's civilization which resulted in Chief Long Lance's death is a terrible arraignment on our civilization," the Ohio History Day president concluded.

SCHOOL BAND ACTIVE

E. L. Diney, superintendent of city schools, welcomed the gathering to Logan Elm at the beginning of the exercises and the Circleville high school band under the direction of C. F. Zaenglein played several musical selections. Rev. Herman Sayre, pastor of the First Methodist church, offered the invocation and gave benediction.

Many of the visitors at the celebration admired the excellent rehabilitation work to the Logan Elm which was completed by Stanley Speed, Columbus, through a campaign for public subscription conducted by The Ohio State Journal, The Scioto Gazette of Chillicothe and The Herald.

The little log cabin containing the registration book was filled most of the afternoon with persons in attendance adding their names to the long list of Logan Elm visitors.

At four o'clock Dr. and Mrs. Jones entertained more than 200 persons at an informal tea at their Park-l home. The occasion was in honor of Mr. Bricker, whose fluent address earlier in the day swayed his listeners under the Logan Elm.

The entire spacious home was beautifully decorated with fall flowers including marigolds, zinnias and asters.

During the enjoyable hour, Mrs. William Ramsey, of Cosopolis, Pa., and Mrs. J. A. Schoedinger, of Columbus, poured.

Elsea Skaggs, 18, of Terryville, Ky., was fined $100 and costs by Mayor B. T. Hedges, Monday, and was ordered to the county jail until fine and costs are paid. Skaggs was charged with possession of liquor following his arrest late Saturday in an alley in the rear of Watt-st.

Police claim he pulled a knife on Officer Fred Fitzpatrick but when discovered by Morris Boggs put it back in his pocket.

Several others were arrested at the same time by Officers Fitzpatrick and McCrady. They included Fred Lamaster, of Cedar Hill, who forfeited $10 bond; Ora Keaton, 21, of Terryville, Ky., and Jay McKenzie, 17, of Lancaster, Pa. D. D. 6, both of whom were released.

FORFEITS $14 BOND

Harold Brobst, 48, of Lockbourne, forfeited a $14 bond in the mayor's court after being arrested for intoxication at midnight Saturday at a south end dance. He was jailed by Officers McCrady and Fitzpatrick and Deputy Sheriff Fissell.

William Lowery, 50, of Clinton, was fined $5 and costs when arrested at the same time.

Jerry Smallwood, S. Western-ave, was also fined $5 and costs for intoxication.

Amos Taylor of Goldsberry, N. C., and Mancel Varner of Pittsburgh are in the city jail charged with destruction of property following their arrest Monday morning by Officer McCrady. They are held for Pennsylvania railroad authorities.

Martin Shisler alias Marshall Smith was arrested at 11:05 p. m. Sunday by Officers Fitzpatrick and Smith for intoxication. He has not yet been given a hearing.

CUYAHOGA BANDIT'S 'BREAK' IS FUTILE

COLUMBUS, Oct. 2—Frustrated in an attempt to incite a riot when 900 fellow-prisoners shunned his "call to arms," George Leeder, 27-year-old Cuyahoga-co burglar and one of Ohio Penitentiary's "bad boys," today was lodged in solitary confinement at the prison.

GUARD PROSECUTOR FROM BANDIT GANG

Fearing gangsters hidden in the bleak mountains near the Great Boulder Dam led by a Texas desperado who escaped from the county jail, the sheriff's forces today threw a guard around Roger Foley, assistant district attorney who was threatened with kidnapping. Authorities redoubled their vigilance at the jail.

The desperado, A. R. "Blackie" Morgan, escaped with the aid of two men who entered the jail with a pass key and sawed away the bars. Morgan has threatened to kidnap Foley in order to destroy evidence against three other men implicated in a huge counterfeiting plot, according to officials.

3 BURN TO DEATH

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Oct. 2.—Three persons were burned to death and five others were injured when fire destroyed an automobile after it had been sideswiped by another machine near here today.

Trapped in the flaming wreckage as the car swerved crazily over an embankment, Frances Reisman, 16, and Mollie Levensen, 30, of Scranton, and Edward Katz, Wilkes-Barre, were burned beyond recognition.

Ants Overcome Hornets in Struggle for Food

Monterey, Calif.—Black ants won a victory over hornets in a two-day battle for food at the home of Mrs. Annie Norwood.

The hornets had built a nest under the eaves of the Norwood porch and were progressing famously until the ants in the neighborhood declared war, moving in single file upon the enemy. A hornet black with ants would disconnect itself from the nest and drop helpless to the floor, failing to rise again. Two of the hornets were captured and tied to the outside of their nest by means of some material evolved by the ants.

THE DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

In his soft Georgia drawl, he began his first story. It was a treatise on "fast thinking"—an implied compliment to young Mr. Joseph Cronin, the youth who led the Griffs to victory. Roberts said: "It reminds me of the story of the darky down in Gaw-gah. As the narrative waxed fast, somebody heaved from the audience, 'Hey! You're on the air!'"

"Don't kid yo'self," was Mr. Roberts' pert rejoinder. "This is just a family party. We all aren't on the air!"

A goose-pimply radio audience, however, strained its ears, to catch further morsels.

"And Ah am also reminded of a story," continued the irrepressible Mr. Roberts. "of the old darky who married a very young wife."

This time the radio went dead. "And I want to tell you all an other story," Mr. Roberts went on. "about the colored center-felder who had to chase a sure home run into the tall grass. Well, when he got theah—"

Once again the radio went dead. This time it did not resume until a new speaker was addressing the Victory banquet.

remarked at the beginning of his talk that he had been warned not to talk politics. "Well, I'll overlook that subject today because I realize I'm in alien territory," he said.

Preceding Mr. Bricker's address, Mrs. Howard Jones, president of the Ohio History Day Association and a tireless worker in the organization since its beginning twenty years ago, was introduced by Mr. Carlisle and gave an interesting resume of past meetings, listing the speakers which have appeared on the programs. Mrs. Jones bitterly arraigned the white man's civilization for the sad plight which befall Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance, a pure-blood member of the Blackfoot tribe, who appeared on the History Day program several years ago and who recently committed suicide. "Chief Long Lance was attempting to live the white man's life and became entangled in fast company while in Hollywood," and becoming discouraged, took his own life," Mrs. Jones said.

"The evils of the white man's civilization which resulted in Chief Long Lance's death is a terrible arraignment on our civilization," the Ohio History Day president concluded.

E. L. Dailey, superintendent of city schools, welcomed the gathering to Logan Elm at the beginning of the exercises and the Circleville high school band under the direction of C. F. Zaenglein played several musical selections. Rev. Herman Sayre, pastor of the First Methodist church, offered the invocation and gave benediction.

Many of the visitors at the celebration admired the excellent re-habilitation work to the Logan Elm which was completed by Stanley Speed, Columbus, through a campaign for public subscription conducted by The Ohio State Journal, The Scioto Gazette of Chillicothe and The Herald.

The little log cabin containing the registration book was filled most of the afternoon with persons in attendance adding their names to the long list of Logan Elm visitors.

At four o'clock Dr. and Mrs. Jones entertained more than 200 persons at an informal tea at their Park-pl home. The occasion was in honor of Mr. Bricker, whose fluent address earlier in the day swayed his listeners under the Logan Elm.

The entire spacious home was beautifully decorated with fall flowers including marigolds, zinnia and asters.

During the enjoyable hour, Mrs. William Ramsey, of Coraopolis, Pa., and Mrs. J. A. Schoedinger, of Columbus, poured.

GUESTS REGISTERED

Out-of-town guests besides Mr. Bricker, the honored guest, and Mrs. Bricker, of Columbus were Mrs. J. A. Schoedinger, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Schoedinger, Mrs. J. E. Clark, John Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ryan, Mrs. Jonathan Poirman, Mrs. L. W. Funk, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Clark, Mrs. J. F. Keyes, Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Baldwin, Jennette Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. George Florence and Senator and Mrs. Robert Pfeiffer of Columbus; Mrs. Laura Bricker, Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Trimble and Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Mooney of Mt. Sterling, Mr. and Mrs. John Dunlap Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. John Dunlap Sr., of Williamsport; Mr. and Mrs. William Kidder, Mrs. E. O. Bowman and Mrs. W. W. Keifer of Springfield, and Miss Katherine Mills, Mrs. Vernon Barrett, Roy Sampson Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Evans and John Poland of Chillicothe, and Mrs. Ramsey of Coraopolis, Pa.

Police Court

Elesa Skaggs, 18, of Terryville, Ky., was fined $100 and costs by Mayor B. T. Hedges, Monday, and was ordered to the county jail until fine and costs are paid. Skaggs was charged with possession of liquor following his arrest late Saturday in an alley in the rear of Watt-st.

Police claim he pulled a knife on Officer Fred Fitzpatrick but when discovered by Morris Boggs put it back in his pocket.

Several others were arrested at the same time by Officers Fitzpatrick and McCrady. They included Fred Lamaster, of Cedar Hill, who forfeited $10 bond; Ora Keaton, 21, of Terryville, Ky., and Jay McKenzie, 17, of Lancaster R. F. D. 6, both of whom were released.

FORFEITS $14 BOND

Harold Brobst, 48, of Lockbourne, forfeited a $14 bond in the mayor's court after being arrested for intoxication at midnight Saturday at a south end dance. He was jailed by Officers McCrady and Fitzpatrick and Deputy Sheriff Fissell.

William Lowery, 50, of Clinton-st, was fined $5 and costs when arrested at the same time.

Jerry Smallwood, S. Western-ave, was also fined $5 and costs for intoxication.

Amos Taylor of Goldsberry, N. C., and Manvil Varner of Pittsburg are in the city jail charged with destruction of property following their arrest Monday morning by Officer McCrady. They are held for Pennsylvania railroad authorities.

Martin Shisler alias Marshall Smith was arrested at 11:05 p. m. Sunday by Officers Fitzpatrick and Smith for intoxication. He has not yet been given a hearing.

CUYAHOGA BANDIT'S 'BREAK' IS FUTILE

COLUMBUS, Oct. 2—Frustrated in an attempt to incite a riot when 900 fellow-prisoners shunned his "call to arms," George Leeder, 27-year-old Cuyahoga-co burglar and one of Ohio Penitentiary's "bad boys," today was lodged in solitary confinement at the prison.

Leeder was hurried away to "the hole" (a solitary confinement cell) yesterday after he had attempted to arouse 900 prisoners into a riot at breakfast in the east dining hall of the penitentiary.

Ants Overcome Hornets in Struggle for Food

Monterey, Calif.—Black ants won a victory over hornets in a two-day battle for food at the home of Mrs. Annie Norwood.

The hornets had built a nest under the eaves of the Norwood porch and were progressing famously until the ants in the neighborhood declared war, moving in single file upon the enemy. A hornet black with ants would disconnect itself from the nest and drop helplessly to the floor, falling to rise again. Two of the hornets were captured and tied to the outside of their nest by means of some material evolved by the ants.

before the American public today. In addition to the problem of veterans' relief, the legionnaires were to pass upon resolutions urging immediate payment of adjusted compensation, opposition to recognition of Russia, strengthening of national defenses; curtailment of tax-exempt securities, a war against crime and other weighty matters.

The Legion post at Greenfield, Ind., believes the veterans are the ones to solve the liquor distribution question after the 18th amendment is repealed.

BONUS DEATH SEEN

An early death for efforts to place the national organization in favor of immediate payment of the bonus was predicted by the legionnaires who pull the strings. Only a handful of state departments have endorsed that proposal. It was believed that a resolution urging payment of the bonus as soon as the financial condition of the nation warrants would be submitted by the resolutions committee.

Convention officials have set aside the entire day tomorrow for the official parade, which will start at 9:30 a. m. and wind down Michigan-ave through Soldiers Field, where thousands of spectators will be seated.

before the American public today.

In addition to the problem of veterans' relief, the legionnaires were to pass upon resolutions urging immediate payment of adjusted compensation, opposition to recognition of Russia, strengthening of national defenses; curtailment of tax-exempt securities, a war against crime and other weighty matters.

The Legion post at Greenfield, Ind., believes the veterans are the ones to solve the liquor distribution question after the 18th amendment is repealed.

BONUS DEATH SEEN

An early death for efforts to place the national organization in favor of immediate payment of the bonus was predicted by the legionnaires who pull the strings. Only a handful of state departments have endorsed that proposal. It was believed that a resolution urging payment of the bonus as soon as the financial condition of the nation warrants would be submitted by the resolutions committee.

Convention officials have set aside the entire day tomorrow for the official parade, which will start at 9:30 a. m. and wind down Michigan-ave through Soldiers Field, where thousands of spectators will be seated.

More than 140,000 marchers and nearly 500 bands and drum corps are expected to participate in the procession which will require nine hours to pass a given point.

HANLEY OPENS UNIQUE GARDEN

A unique and novel beer garden was opened to the public this week by Hanley's Tea Room in the basement of the present restaurant at 112 E. Main-st. The walls and ceiling of the room have been lined with natural bark and the tables and chairs are made in a rustic fashion from unfinished wood.

At one side of the room is a counter of the same construction which houses a new draught beer dispensing unit of the latest design. The proprietor is Gerald Hanley.

It would be interesting to know where that scientist who said man is improving in intelligence made his observations.

Woolworth Heir and Fiancee

Children of two prominent New York society families whose engagement was recently announced. They are Miss Dorothy Randolph Fell, step-daughter of Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, and Woolworth Donohue, son of Mrs. James P. Donohue and grandson of the founder of the Woolworth "five-and-ten-cent" fortune. They will be married in December.

Woolworth
Kolinsky is the fur of an animal of the weasel family, indigenous to Siberia and China. The under and top hair is short and rather weak but regular, and the color is generally tawny yellow but it is almost always dyed to imitate other members of the weasel family. It is also known as red sable, Siberian milk, tartar sable.

Too Many Words

"Debate confuses," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown. "Many an honest garden of thought is lost under an avalanche of words."

Medals for Dogs
The New York Anti-Vivisection society annually presents the medal of the Legion of Hero Dogs to dogs of varying pedigree that have exhibited unusual intelligence and courage. The medals are small metal disks with "Always True Hearted" engraved on one side and with a laurel wreath on the other.

Woolworth Heir and Fiancee

Children of two prominent New York society families whose engagement was recently announced. They are Miss Dorothy Randolph Fell, step-daughter of Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, and Woolworth Donohue, son of Mrs. James P. Donohue and grandson of the founder of the Woolworth "five-and-ten-cent" fortune. They will be married in December.

Kolinsky
Kolinsky is the fur of an animal of the weasel family, indigenous to Siberia and China. The under and top hair is short and rather weak but regular, and the color is generally tawny yellow but it is almost always dyed to imitate other members of the weasel family. It is also known as red sable, Siberian mink, tartar sable.

SEEN LINEUP FOR GROUP THREE

New Sub-chairmen To Meet Under J. W. Crist
This Year.

Department No. 3 of the Pumpkin Show, under the direction of Wallace Crist, has undergone several changes in chairmanships.
G. Stevenson is acting as chairman of the corn display filling the vacancy left by the death of Charles M. Leist; Sennet M.
Coyder is in charge of the pumpkin, squash and freak vegetable displays succeeding Robert L.

Brehmer, and C. T. Gilmore is in charge of small grains and forage seeds replacing J. Monroe Morris.
Mr. Crist announces that Dr. E.
B. Tussing, horticulturist of Ohio State university, will judge the fruit and vegetable displays. The judge of the grain display is not yet announced.

The corn display will be located on W. Main-st near the Stevenson store. Prizes ranging from $2 to 50 cents are listed.

The pumpkin, squash and freak vegetable displays will be on N.
Court-st on both sides of the street between Watt and High-sts.
As usual, $35 for the best display of pumpkins and squashes is the top prize with additional prizes for the largest pumpkin, largest squash and most unusual freak pumpkin, squash or vegetable. The lowest prize in this display is $1.

SWEARINGEN BACK

Reliable James Swearingen who comes in from Jackson-twp every year to operate the fruit show will again be in charge of his 'pet'.

This display will be located in the same place as last year on W.
Main-st. Displays will be cared for and protected until 5 p. m. on Saturday after which time they will be left at the exhibitor's risk.
All fruits must be grown by the exhibitor.

Prizes of 75 and 50 cents prevail with $1 given for the five largest apples of any one variety.
A top prize of $3 is given for the best display of fruit grown by the exhibitor.

Fred Brunner's vegetable display on the south side of W.
Main-st is located as usual. Only one exhibit is permitted by the same party in any one class; if there is only one exhibit in a class,
the highest prize will be paid.

Potatoes, yams, turnips, onions, radishes, carrots, cucumbers, cabbage, celery, beets, peppers, tomaatoes, and beans including white marrowfat, lima, white kidney, white navy and bush lima are included in the class with $2 being the top prize for the best display of vegetables.

TEST IS CLOSE ONE

All samples entered in the small grain and forage seed display, located on E. Main-st, must be raised by the exhibitor in 1933.
The seed value of the exhibits will be emphasized in judging. Purity, relative freedom from disease and mixtures, probably viability of the seed, uniformity and truthness are main factors to be considered. All exhibits must be correctly named as the variety.

Rye, barley, red winter wheat,
white oats, red oats, clover seed, timothy seed and soy beans are included in the display.

Art for Sweet Charity's Sake

Percy L. Crosby, noted cartoonist and creator of the inimitable
"Skippy," pictured as he worked on a campaign poster to swell the Community Chest of Atlanta, Ga. Crosby was selected for the task by shown working in his McLean, Va., home.

GENERAL Dual BALLOON

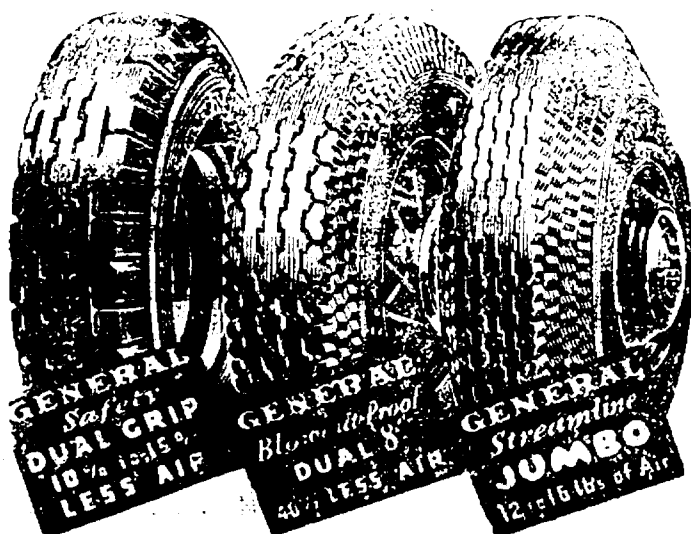

Exclusive low air pressure features of this tire make it softer and safer. 40% less air.
80% more non-skid. Blowout-Proof. Let me put this remarkable tire on your car for greater safety, comfort and mileage. I can make you a good proposition during this introductory period.

GENERAL Streamline JUMBO

Requires less than half the air pressure of conventional style balloons. Bigger, softer cushions of air that float the car over roughest roads. Come in for a demonstration ride on Jumbos. If you like I'll put a set on your own car for a trial spin, without obligation to you.

GENERAL Dual GRIP

Here's everything you want and need in a tire. A wider, heavier tread; tougher rubber compounded for longer, slower wear.
Big husky body for brutal service. Lower air pressure through patented design. More mileage than you have ever known. My special trade-in plan makes it easy to have these tires on your car. Come in and let me make you an offer.

AFTER thorough investigation I have selected the General Tire for my customers. It's patented low air pressure construction results in exclusive advantage not found in other tires. With this remarkable tire and our unusual service facilities I can do a better job for my customers. Come in, investigate this combination and judge for yourself.

FANCY WORK FOUND IN FRIEDMAN ROOM

Weaving Demonstration By Mrs. John Dunlap, Jr., Is Arranged.

The Friedman building, W. Main-st., will again be the scene of the Fancy work display of the Pumpkin Show with many entries finding their way into the hands of persons connected with the display. The Fancy work show comes under Department No. 6 in charge of Lawrence J. Johnson.

Mrs. E. S. Stephens is chairman of the display and, as in recent years, is aided efficiently by Mrs. Robert Bates and Mrs. Frank Palm.

Entries for the Fancy work display close Thursday noon. Articles entered in previous shows are not eligible for prize competition. It is another rule of the department that in case of one entry only in a class, second prize will be awarded.

PREMIUMS REVISED

Several classes of displays have been revised so it is advisable for exhibitors to carefully study the premium list.

Quilts, bed spreads, sheets and pillow case sets, pillow cases, luncheon sets, table covers, library scarfs, pillows, buffet sets, embroidery, vanity sets, aprons, hand-made rugs and several other premiums are listed in the lineup for this display.

This display customarily attracts more attention than any of the entire show especially among women. The top premium in the event is $3 and the lowest 50 cents.

As an added attraction in the Fancy work department, Mrs. John Dunlap Jr., of Williamsport, will demonstrate the weaving of materials on her Ernberg Hand Loom.

This loom is modeled after the early American hand loom and will be interesting for that reason.

Mrs. Dunlap will display some pieces of her work so that an idea of the range of materials may be had.

The hours of demonstration will be from three to five in the afternoon and from seven to nine in the evening on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Railway School Travels 5,000 Miles Annually

Douglas, Ariz.—The "Little Red School House on Wheels," teaches 8,000 pupils annually, has no "vacation" for its teacher, William Nichols, and travels 10,000 miles every two years.

William—pardon—Professor Nichols is known as a "rule examiner" for the Southern Pacific railroad yards, visiting all terminal and division points, "teaching" all employees in the "operating class."

Nichols' movable schoolroom is a standard size passenger coach, altered to meet the needs of the teacher, the pupils and the equipment. It has been in use 16 years.

The railroad "school" will be attended by 200 men here, Professor Nichols said. He has "taught" some of them for more than 20 years.

Colville Named to Important Office

ROBERT G. COLVILLE stepped into the breach left by the death of Thomas F. Jeffries and as show treasurer and director of Dept. 1 he finds his hands full. Mr. Colville is well qualified for the work, and is an able successor to a man who was one of the pillars of the big show.

Home Helps

Relish the Relish

Piccalilli and Chow-Chow were two of grandmother's favorite relishes. When we can buy such good pickle relishes at the grocery it seems useless to make them at home, but there is a gratifying pride in saying, "Yes, this is my own relish recipe, do you like it?" Have you had that thrill of pleasure in offering made-in-your-own kitchen relishes to your friends?

Here are some of my favorite relishes:

Piccalilli

- 1 qt. green tomatoes 1/2 C. salt
- 1 small celery 1 C. vinegar
- 2 sweet red peppers 1 lb. brown sugar
- 2 sweet green peppers 1 tsp. mustard
- 2 large mild onions 1 tsp. turmeric
- 1 small head cabbage

Chop the vegetables, cover with salt, and let stand over night. In the morning, drain and press in a cloth to remove all the liquid possible. Add the vinegar, sugar and spices, and simmer until clear. Seal in clean, hot jars.

Chow Chow

- 2 qts. small green tomatoes 1 Tbsp. salt
- 6 green peppers 2 C. brown sugar
- 6 red peppers 1/2 tsp. black pepper
- 1 small head cabbage 2 Tbsp. mustard seed
- 2 bunches celery 2 Tbsp. turmeric
- 1 pt. small onions 2 Tbsp. allspice
- 1 qt. small cucumbers 1 Tbsp. cloves
- 3 qts. vinegar 1 Tbsp. cinnamon

Wash the vegetables and cut them into very small pieces. Cover them with salt water, made by adding 1 cupful of salt to a gallon of water, and let them stand in this for 6 to 8 hours. Drain at the end of this time, and wash with cold water. Heat the vinegar, and to it add the salt, sugar and spices. Add this to the vegetables and cook until they are soft. Pack into sterilized jars and seal while hot. Cool and store.

Dixie Relish

- or 4 whole red peppers 1 pt. white onions
- 1 pt. chopped sweet green peppers 4 Tbsp. mustard seed
- 1 pt. chopped sweet red peppers 1/2 C. sugar
- 1 qt. chopped cabbage 1 qt. vinegar

Soak green and red peppers in brine for 24 hours, using one cup salt to one gallon of water. Take from the brine and freshen for one or two hours. Drain well, cut open, remove seeds and white sections, chop the peppers. Put the peppers and onions through the food chopper separately and mix before mixing. Add chopped cabbage and onions to chopped peppers. Add salt, spices, sugar and vinegar. Let the mixture stand over night in a covered crock orenameled pan. Drain and heat the liquid. When hot, add the other ingredients and cook for 10 minutes. Seal in hot, clean jars.

Best Relish

- 1 qt. chopped cabbage 1 C. sugar
- 1 qt. chopped beets 1 C. vinegar
- 1 C. grated horseradish

Combine the cabbage, beets and horseradish and season with salt. Seal the vinegar, dissolve the sugar in it and add it to the first mixture. Cook until clear. Seal in clean, hot jars.

Many Research Laboratories

There are about 1,500 research laboratories of the United States which cost the corporations and associations by which they are maintained about $200,000,000 annually.

Timber Rattler Dangerous
The timber rattler is a dangerous creature and its strike quite frequently results in death if the patient is not able to obtain treatment. The large snakes secrete more venom than the smaller snakes, but even the baby snakes are capable of injecting a small amount of venom after their fangs harden.

NEW TIRE SAVES LIVES

Remarkable New Invention Makes Safest Tire Ever Built 3 Times Safer from Blow-outs

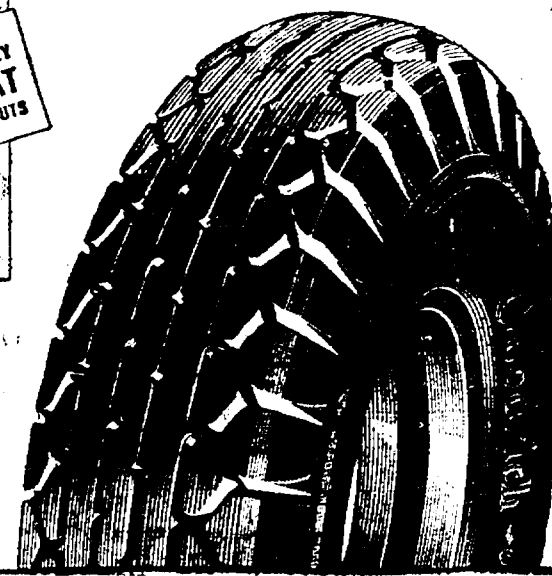

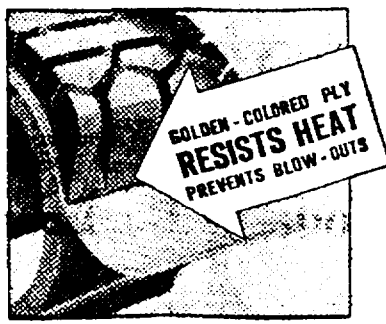

NO EXTRA COST TO PUBLIC

WHEN the speedometer reads 40, 50, 60—the heat inside your tires becomes terrific. A blister starts... gets bigger and bigger... Until BANG! A blow-out! And you're headed for trouble.

Now, to protect you from blow-outs, every Goodrich Safety Silvertown has the amazing new Life-Saver Golden Ply that resists heat. Fabric and rubber don't separate... thus blisters don't form. Blow-outs are prevented by overcoming their very cause!

And that isn't all. Goodrich Silvertowns have the most skid-resisting tread. Its squeegee drying action gives your car extra road-grip, and reduces danger of skidding to a minimum.

Let us put Goodrich Safety Silvertowns on your car. Remember, they cost no more than other standard makes.

FANCY WORK FOUND IN FRIEDMAN ROOM

Weaving Demonstration By Mrs. John Dunlap, Jr., Is Arranged.

The Friedman building, W. Main-st., will again be the scene of the Fancy work display of the Pumpkin Show with many entries finding their way into the hands of persons connected with the display. The Fancy work show comes under Department No. 6 in charge of Lawrence J. Johnson.

Mrs. E. S. Stephens is chairman of the display and, as in recent years, is aided efficiently by Mrs. Robert Bates and Mrs. Frank Palm.

Entries for the Fancy work display close Thursday noon. Articles entered in previous shows are not eligible for prize competition. It is another rule of the department that in case of one entry only in a class, second prize will be awarded.

PREMIUMS REVISED

Several classes of displays have been revised so it is advisable for exhibitors to carefully study the premium list.

Quilts, bed spreads, sheets and pillow case sets, pillow cases, luncheon sets, table covers, library scarfs, pillows, buffet sets, embroidery, vanity sets, aprons, hand-made rugs and several other premiums are listed in the lineup for this display.

This display customarily attracts more attention than any of the entire show especially among women. The top premium in the event is $3 and the lowest 50 cents. As an added attraction in the Fancy work department, Mrs. John Dunlap Jr., of Williamsport, will demonstrate the weaving of materials on her Ernberg Hand Loom.

This loom is modeled after the early American hand loom and will be interesting for that reason.

Mrs. Dunlap will display some pieces of her work so that an idea of the range of materials may be had.

The hours of demonstration will be from three to five in the afternoon and from seven to nine in the evening on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Railway School Travels 5,000 Miles Annually

Douglas, Ariz.—The "Little Red School House on Wheels" teaches 8,000 pupils annually, has no "vacation" for its teacher, William Nichols, and travels 10,000 miles every two years.

William—pardon—Professor Nichols is known as a "rule examiner" for the Southern Pacific railroad yards, visiting all terminal and division points, "teaching" all employees in the "operating class."

Nichols' movable schoolroom is a standard size passenger coach, altered to meet the needs of the teacher, the pupils, and the equipment. It has been in use 16 years.

The railroad "school" will be attended by 200 men here, Professor Nichols said. He has "taught" some of them for more than 20 years.

Colville Named to Important Office

ROBERT G. COLVILLE stepped into the breach left by the death of Thomas F. Jeffries and as show treasurer and director of Dept. 1 he finds his hands full. Mr. Colville is well qualified for the work, and is an able successor to a man who was one of the pillars of the big show.

Home Helps

Relish the Relish

Piccalilli and Chow-Chow were two of grandmother's favorite relishes. When we can buy such good pickle relishes at the grocery it seems useless to make them at home, but there is a gratifying pride in saying, "Yes, this is my own relish recipe, do you like it?" Have you had that thrill of pleasure in offering made-in-your-own kitchen relishes to your friends?

Here are some of my favorite relishes:

Piccalilli

- 1 qt. green tomatoes 1/2 C. salt
- 1 stalk celery 3 C. vinegar
- 2 sweet red peppers 1 lb. brown sugar
- 2 sweet green peppers 1 tsp. mustard
- 2 large mild onions 1 tsp. turmeric
- 1 small head cabbage

Chop the vegetables, cover with salt, and let stand over night. In the morning, drain and press in a cloth to remove all the liquid possible. Add the vinegar, sugar and spices, and simmer until clear. Seal in clean, hot jars.

Chow Chow

- 2 qts. small green tomatoes 1 Tbsp. salt
- 6 green peppers 2 C. brown sugar
- 6 red peppers 1/2 tsp. black pepper
- 1 small head cabbage 2 Tbsp. mustard seed
- 2 bunches celery 2 Tbsp. turmeric
- 1 pt. small onions 2 Tbsp. allspice
- 1 qt. small cucumbers 1 Tbsp. cloves
- 3 qts. vinegar

Wash the vegetables and cut them into very small pieces. Cover them with salt water, made by adding 1 cupful of salt to a gallon of water, and let them stand in this for 6 to 8 hours. Drain at the end of this time, and wash with cold water. Heat the vinegar, and to it add the salt, sugar and spices. Add this to the vegetables and cook until they are soft. Pack into sterilized jars and seal while hot. Cool and store.

Dixie Relish

- 1 or 4 whole red peppers 1 pt. white onions
- 1 pt. chopped sweet green peppers 2 Tbsp. salt
- 1 pt. chopped sweet red peppers 4 Tbsp. mustard seed
- 1 qt. chopped cabbage 2 Tbsp. celery seed
- 1 qt. vinegar 1/4 C. sugar

Soak green and red peppers in brine for 24 hours, using one cup salt to one gallon of water. Take from the brine and freshen for one or two hours. Drain well, cut open, remove seeds and white sections, and chop the peppers. Put the peppers and onions through the food chopper separately and measure before mixing. Add chopped cabbage and onions to chopped peppers. Add salt, spices, sugar and vinegar. Let the mixture stand over night in a covered crock or enameled pan. Drain and heat the liquid. When hot, add the other ingredients and cook for 10 minutes. Seal in hot, clean jars.

Beet Relish

- 1 qt. chopped cabbage 2 C. vinegar
- 1 qt. chopped beets 1 C. sugar
- 1 C. grated horseradish 1 C. salt

Combine the cabbage, beets and horseradish and season with salt. Scald the vinegar, dissolve the sugar in it and add it to the first mixture. Cook until clear. Seal in clean, hot jars.

Many Research Laboratories There are about 1,500 research laboratories of the United States which cost the corporations and associations by which they are maintained about $200,000,000 annually.

Timber Rattler Dangerous
The timber rattler is a dangerous creature and its strike quite frequently results in death if the patient is not able to obtain treatment. The large snakes secrete more venom than the smaller snakes, but even the baby snakes are capable of injecting a small amount of venom after their fangs harden.

Wallace and Chester Wolf To Have Charge of Various Classes.

Set up as a department of its own by the show society, the division has at last come back into its own. The division is under the supervision of L. E.
Miller who announced today that horses to be eligible for premiums must be in the parade on Thursday evening.

Thursday evening will be given over almost entirely to the horse parade and show.

In the saddle class, J. A. Wallace is chairman. This class will be exhibited at 8 p. m. Thursday in two classes, local three-gaited class and local five-gaited class. The open classes including three gaited class and five gaited class will be shown Friday at 8 p. m. The pony class also under Mr. Wallace will be shown at 8 p. m. Saturday.

old, mare four years old and over, mare three years old, mare two years old, mare one year old, mare colt, brood mare with not less than two of her progeny, team draft horses, stallion and three or more of his get, champion stallion, champion mare.

A light harness class for ladies and gents has been added, Mr.
Miller announced.

In the pony class the best handled, gaited and equipped with both boys and girls entered will receive prizes in the Shetland division. Prizes will also be given for the best handled, gaited and equipped ponies of 12 hands or over and other prizes for most complete outfit in the pony harness class.

Mound in Shape of Man

An Indian mound in the shape of a walking man is believed to be the only prehistoric effigy of its type.
The earthen mound, near Raraboo, Wis., is 214 feet long. The horned man walking westward, is believed to represent a god of the Dakota Indians, named Ilckoya. It is one of 20,000 Indian mounds in the state.

Mexican City Ravaged by Tornado and Flood

An excellent air view of the city of Tampico, Mexican coastal municipality, where a terrific hurricane, of 125-mile an hour force, spread death and destruction over a wide area. The death toll is expected to reach 5,000 and the damage to property is estimated at many millions. Inset is President Abelardo Rodriguez, of Mexico, who ordered every available relief body to the scene of the disaster.

Jungle Fires Rout Animals Disturbed by jungle fires in the Singapore district of India, many tigers and panthers are believed to have reached an island by swimming a mile across the Strait of Johore.

Cause of Baldness
Cutting the hair is the principal cause of baldness, says a professor of Columbia university.

Releasing the Life-Buoy
Navy regulations require an efficient person to be stationed to release the life-buoy, at all times at sea and when anchored in a strong tideway in port.

Circleville's Part Important One

One of the most important departments of the entire Pumpkin Show is probably the least noticed because the work is behind the scenes. That is department No. 1 which is now under the supervision of Robert G. Gilliland. He is assisted by T. O. Herrmann in charge of soliciting, and C. T. Gilmore in charge of lighting; Mack Parrett Jr., and Sterling Lamb in charge of locating concessions and manufacturing displays.

This department is responsible for the business end of the show. Part of the committee works the entire year round; especially is Mr. Parrett's office as secretary required to do this. All the 'kicks,' 'knocks' complaints and what-not go to him. It is his task to handle the exhibitors including concession men and with everyone trying to get on the Court and Main corner he has a job pacifying the men.

Mr. Gilliland's job this year has not demanded any effort because the show society decided not to solicit contributions from merchants. Mr. Gilliland has always been ready to do his part.

Mr. Herrmann's task has been to write newspaper advertising for The Herald and for various county papers which receive a portion of the money appropriated for this purpose by the society. He has held this post for several years.

Mr. Gilmore, as manager of the Southern Ohio Electric Co., handles the lighting problem easier than any other person could. His men during the past week were busy every day wiring the uptown district for the thirtieth annual show.

Mr. Lamb is Mr. Parrett's assistant and is forced to shoulder part of the load of handling concessionaires during the big week. Either Mr. Parrett or Mr. Lamb will be found in the secretary's office in the City building at all hours during the Pumpkin Show's four days.

L. J. JOHNSON HEADS FLOWER SHOWS

LAWRENCE J. JOHNSON is serving his fourth consecutive year as chairman of Department No. 6 in the Pumpkin Show. In this department are listed the Fancy work and the Flower displays. Both located on the south side of W. Main-st prove real attractions during the show. The work of Mr. Johnson and his assistants is highly valued by the Pumpkin Show society and residents of the city.

SWEETS FOUND ON WEST MAIN

Glenn Nickerson In Charge of Department; All Assistants Qualified.

The sweetest department of the show is again under the direction of Glenn I. Nickerson. This department is concentrated on the south side of W. Main-st filling the half block from Court-st to the alley beside the Barrere Nickerson hardware.

George Roof is in charge of the bread department. Robert Maloney of the cake division, Joseph M. Lynch of the butter section, Harley B. Colwell of the jellies and canned goods and Henry Joseph of the candies.

Prizes in Mr. Roof's department will be given for white bread, graham bread, nut bread, white rolls, biscuits, coffee cake, rusks and ginger bread.

In Mr. Maloney's department prizes are awarded for chocolate cake, coconut layer cake, caramel cake, layer cake, yellow sponge cake, plain angel food cake, iced angel food cake, plain cake, devil's food cake, fruit cake, plain cookies, nut cookies and crullers.

In Mr. Lynch's section prizes are given for the best roll of country made butter and for the most appropriate design. Honey is also found under his supervision with the best six cones to receive prizes and the best six jars of extracted honey also to be awarded cash. Mr. Lynch could make a meal on his department because beside butter and honey are found eggs with prizes for the best dozen brown and white eggs.

Jellies and canned good in Mr. Colwell's department must be this year's product. The largest and most attractive display of jellies will be awarded cash and so will the largest and most attractive display of fruits and vegetables.

All candy placed in Henry Joseph's hands must be home-made with dealers and manufacturers barred. All candy will be donated to the little ones at the Children's Home.

Prizes will be given for the best pound of plain fudge, nut fudge, taffy, cream candy and divinity.

The displays in this department last year were probably the best in the Pumpkin Show's history and everything leans toward even a better exhibit this year.

FLOWER SHOW IN SAME SITE

Bales, Fickardt, Burns In Charge of Display; Close Entries Thursday at 6.

Dr. B. R. Bales, chairman, with George H. Fickardt and Joseph Burns are again the flower men of the Pumpkin Show. This group is in Department No. 6 headed by Lawrence J. Johnson.

The flower display will be on the south side of W. Main-st and is for amateur growers only. Entries close Thursday at 6 p. m. and only one exhibit by the same party in any one class will be received. If there is only one exhibit in a class second prize will be paid. The committee is not responsible for owner's vases or baskets.

The entries will be booked at Fickardt's drug store.

Three dollars is the top premium allowed with 75 cents the lowest.

Flowers included in the premium book are dahlias, cosmos, marigolds, zinnias, cockscomb, winter bouquet of dried flowers, artistic vase, garden flowers, and most artistic basket of any kind of garden flowers.

California's Climate
California's climate is a climate composite of the whole world. It has a 1,000-mile expanse, north and south. It has as much difference in climate as there is between northern New York and southern Florida. It has snow-capped mountains and deserts of tropical heat.

Rice May Take On New Flavors

When rice takes the place of potatoes in the menu, it deserves some consideration and a variety of flavorings if it is to attract the family palate. When a chicken has been boiled (or buy canned chicken bouillon) try rice this way:

One quart chicken stock; one finely grated onion; one and one half teaspoons salt; one half teaspoon paprika; one half teaspoon curry powder. Heat the ingredients in the chicken stock, then add three cups of cooked rice and cook together for fifteen minutes. Serve very hot, garnished with finely chopped parsley.

Creole Rice
One large onion; one sweet red pepper or green pepper; one cup canned tomatoes rubbed through a sieve; one half cup cold boiled ham; three cups cooked rice; two teaspoons salt; one teaspoon paprika.

Chop the ham fine and add with the tomato to the onion and minced pepper. Cook slowly (enamel-ed pan) for ten minutes. Then add the rice and seasonings, mix well and heat until very hot. Serve as an accompaniment for meat. Make delicious corquettes when cold.

Italian Rice
Three onions finely chopped; one green pepper finely chopped; one cup strained canned tomatoes; two teaspoons salt; one and one half teaspoons paprika; one half cup grated cheese; three tablespoons cooking oil; four tablespoons washed rice.

Heat the oil in a frying pan and add the rice to it, stirring until the rice is well browned. Then add one and one half cup boiling water, the onions, green pepper and tomatoes. Cook until the rice is soft. Then add the seasoning and cheese. Stir until well blended, and serve with garnish of finely chopped parsley.

PATTERN PARADE fall, 1933

Review this parade from your own favorite easy chair. Study each model carefully for its suitability to your own requirements because whichever you choose, however limited your sewing experience, you can make it yourself!

MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN BOOK for Fall and Winter

presents this review in its interesting pages. First to appear is Marian Martin herself, famous authority on fashions and patterns, with some pointed paragraphs on the highlights of the new fashions.

Next there is a dazzling array of street frocks, stunning suits, smart coats, and chic blouses. Then the new fabrics  are singled out for special attention, and these are followed by exquisite gowns for formal and informal parties, and a lovely evening wrap.

Knitting addicts will next see a stunning short coat and get complete instructions for making it. Slenderizing frocks are shown for larger figures. And there are school and party dresses—a coat for little girls—boys' suits—lovely lingerie for adults—aprons and house dresses—and accessory patterns that make perfect holiday gifts.

A fascinating parade. See it for yourself. Order your copy of the Marian Martin pattern book today. The pattern feature of this newspaper tells you how.

 Fabrics like these are on display in the shops. Why not pay a visit to the piece goods departments and have a look at them?

This coat—M-9764—comes in sizes 16 to 20. The suit—M-9765, sizes 12 to 20. Both are described in the new Marian Martin book.

EXPLORING CATACOMBSCommission Is Hard at Work

A third important series of excavations, known as the Pre-Christian catacombs, will shortly be begun by the well-known early underground cemeteries of the Christian era, St. Sebastian and St. Sebastian, just outside the city.

The pontifical commission of archaeology is directing the operations of the workers engaged in exploring and excavating this underground treasure house of early Christian art and history.

Pre-Christian, who gave his name to the catacombs, was, it is thought, an early Christian martyr, though some archaeologists allege he was only the Roman landlord of the ground where the catacomb was built. At any rate, the existence of these long underground galleries and tunnels, winding for more than a mile altogether, under the Appian Way, has been known for centuries. Various attempts at exploration and identification were made from time to time, notably by Pompeo Leto in the Fifteenth century and again by the celebrated archaeologist G. B. De Ossi in the early Nineteenth century.

Treaty Aids Work.

It has remained for the archaeological work of 1938 to bring the work to a conclusion. The thorough explorations of the countless early Christian tombs is really one of the results of the Lateran treaty between Italy and the Holy See and the concordat which gave the right to the catacombs to the pope. While the disagreement between the church and the state existed in Italy, it was to Italy's interest to order a thorough exploration of these interesting catacombs since the property in them was a matter of dispute.

The remains of early martyrs of the early church are believed to be in these catacombs of Pre-Christian, including those of Sts. Urban, Zeno, Quirinus, Tiburtius, Valerian, and Marcellus.

Records show that these early saints of the church were venerated here as far back as the Fourth century. St. Januarius, patron saint of Naples, is also connected with these catacombs, and was venerated locally. St. Urban was the bishop of whom it is related in the legend of St. Cecilia, that she willed him all her belongings in trust for the church before going to her martyr's death.

Object of Devotion.

Sts. Tiburtius and Valerian are also named in the acts of martyrdom of St. Cecilia, while St. Zeno is believed to have perished during the persecution of the Emperor Claudius in 270 A. D.

The Pre-Christian catacombs were the object of great devotion of the faithful until the coming of the Dark Ages and the destruction of Rome at the hands of the barbarians. They then fell into decay and disuse as places of veneration. Landslides and the vandalism of the savage conquerors of Rome did their work with these early monuments of Christianity, and the price of neglect and the sacking of the barbarians was paid for in rifled tombs and ruined frescoes.

Even now, after all these centuries, there are wall pictures in these catacombs of the Second, Third and Fourth centuries which those who have seen them describe as admirable examples of early Christian art.

Much still remains to be done, for the archaeologists are not yet quite certain if they have reached the lowest level of the galleries. The explorations (though brought to a point which will shortly permit people to visit them) will be slowly continued for some time, yet in the hope that further interesting discoveries may be made.

Changes Found In Crist's Department

J. WALLACE CRIST, JR.

With several changes in the lineup of his department, J. WALLACE CRIST, again hopes to have Department No. 3 one of the high lights of the annual Pumpkin Show. New directors have been named in the pumpkin, corn and small grain displays and all are working diligently to make the show a success.

Pumpkins, squashes, freaks, corn, fruit of all kinds, vegetables and small grains come under Mr. Crist's direction.

Use Custard With Fruit and Cake

THE dessert which pleases the whole family is one which combines the luxury of a guest dish, the simplicity of the children's table and the sturdiness of the masculine favorite—cooked pudding. To make such a dessert calls forth the skill and ingenuity of the cook. But if she remembers that such a combination is possible with a simple custard, some cooked or fresh fruit, and left-over cake, she is well on the way to popularity with her discriminating family.

First Make a Custard
The most useful ingredient of such a dessert is a baked or boiled custard. To make a reliable baked custard, follow this old fashioned recipe:
Six eggs; four tablespoons sugar; four cups milk; one half teaspoon salt; one half teaspoon vanilla; grated nutmeg. Beat the eggs, then add the sugar and salt to them, beat well, then add the milk and vanilla. Mix thoroughly. Strain into a custard dish or casserole which has been rubbed with butter. Sprinkle the top with nutmeg. Set in a shallow pan of hot water, and bake at moderate temperature (325 degrees oven) for one and one fourth, to one and one half hours.

Test by inserting a silver knife in the center of the custard. If the knife comes out clean, the pudding is done.

What To Use

Arrange thick slices of angel food cake in a glass serving dish; cover with thinly sliced bananas, then spoon on large spoonfuls of the baked custard. Sprinkle top with grated coconut and serve.

Cut a loaf angel food cake in half lengthwise. Place the lower half on a platter and cover with a thick layer of peach ice cream; then cover with sliced fresh or canned peaches. Spoon the custard on top and sprinkle with finely chopped roasted almonds. (Heat salted almonds in a very little butter, stirring all the while, until lightly browned.)

On an individual dessert plate, lay two cross-wise halves of a cup cake; cover with cooked cherries and top with a generous spoonful of the baked custard. A cherry on top makes a nice addition.

In a fruit cocktail glass place a spoonful of strawberry preserves, then a spoonful of custard; top with cooked raspberries and another spoonful of custard.

In a parfait glass, at least three cooked fruits may be used, gooseberries on the bottom, then custard; then strawberries; then custard; with red raspberries or cherries next and the top custard. Serve a plain cookie, with such mixtures of fruits and custard.

It may be said to be the fiscal agent of the government.

World's Noisiest Center

Here's the world's noisiest street corner—Broadway and Thirty-fourth street in New York city. Owing to the junction of several streams of motor traffic, three surface car lines, one subway and an elevated, tests show that the noise constantly created combines to deafen the average person 85 per cent.—Collier's Weekly.

"Cuckoo" Is the Word

When life becomes desperately dull in many of the lonely outposts of Afghanistan, the soldiers play kukushka. They dodge around a blindfolded man, who fires a loaded revolver in their direction whenever they shout "cuckoo" at him. Apparently the object of the game is to see how long they can play—and live.—Collier's.

FREE ACT SCHEDULE PROMISES THRILLS

Four excellent free acts have been arranged by Thomas D. Krinn, director of Department No. 7 and vice president of the Pumpkin Show. They will be held as in previous years at Main and Pickaway-sts. at 2 and 7 p. m., at Court and High-sts. at 3 and 8 p. m., at Main and Western-ave. at 4 and 9 p. m. and at the courthouse at 5 and 10 p. m.

The Main-Pickaway act will be Harry Bauers in an aerial act; the Court-High act will be Capt. Earl E. McDonald, sensational high fire diver; the Main-Western act will be the Marriott troupe of acrobats, and the courthouse act

KRINN SATISFIED

Mr. Krinn, who has been picking free acts for a long, long while, vouches for every one of the acts scheduled for this year.

Plenty of music will be provided during the entire week with Circleville high school band and the Junior band scheduled for appearances. The high school band, under the direction of Prof. C. F. Zaenglein, will play each afternoon and evening.

The Hallsville band has been engaged for the entire show week and the American Legion drum corps, always a feature, will be on hand Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

The Mercer Radio and Amplifying Co. will again announce each performance with M. J. Mercier doing the announcing. This addition has been of real assistance to the Pumpkin Show directors.

Rides this year are furnished by the F. B. Gooding Amusement Co., of Columbus. They will consist of merry-go-round, ferris wheel, kiddie airplane, Lindy loop, tilt-a-whirl and hey dey.

EXETER CATHEDRAL IS 800 YEARS OLD

Site Was Once Occupied by Saxon Churches.

Washington.—Exeter, ancient capital of England's southwest, and county town of Devon, is celebrating the eight hundredth anniversary of the consecration of its famous cathedral.

"Even older than the cathedral is the Bishopric of Exeter and Cornwall, which was transferred to Exeter by Edward I in 1285," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "The building of the cathedral was begun sixty years later under William the Conqueror. The site chosen had been twice occupied by Saxon churches, the first built by Athelstan, the second by Canute.

"All that remains today of the original Norman structure are two low massive towers at either end of the transept. The rest of the cathedral was completely rebuilt during the fourteenth century in the rich style of Decorated Gothic.

"Walter de Stapeldon, bishop of Exeter, and one of the foremost patrons of English art and letters during the early fourteenth century, had a large share in this transformation. It was Stapeldon also who in 1314 founded Exeter college, Oxford; and in 1332, Exeter grammar school.

Impressive Edifice.

"Upon entering the cathedral one receives the impression of great length and remarkable symmetry of design. Each part is balanced; and the long, low effect increased by an unbroken roofline extending through nave and choir. On the wall of the north transept is a great clock which has ticked since the days of Edward II in the fourteenth century. It has two dials, one showing the hours and the moon's phases, the other recording the minutes. In the library is the ancient Codex Exoniensis, a ninth century collection of Anglo-Saxon poetry, which has been in the possession of the cathedral since the eleventh century.

"All the history and loyal, independent spirit of the west county is concentrated in Exeter, Queen Elizabeth's 'ever faithful city.' As a Roman town, Isca Damnoniorum, it is a little younger than Paris and as old as London. When the Romans left it in the fifth century it became the Caer Isc of the Britons and the Exancestre of the Saxons.

"During succeeding centuries it endured countless sieges; Saxons, Britons, Danes, and Normans fought to enter the walls. Later the loyal townsmen staunchly upheld their king in many a revolt. Exeter still remembers the time that Edward the Confessor spent Christmas there; and the day when William of Modern Exeter occupies a broad ridge of land on the left bank of the River Exe. At the head of this ridge, hidden by ivy and set in a wide shaded park, are the ruins of Rougemont castle, built by William the Conqueror.

Mol's Coffee House.

"Narrow, stone-paved streets wind between ancient timbered houses, crumbling chapels, and fine old churches. Exeter is a veritable city of churches. In the time of William the Conqueror she possessed no less than twenty-nine! Across the square from the cathedral stands Mol's coffee house, favorite meeting place of those gay adventurers of Devon—Drake, Hawkins, Gilbert and Raleigh.

"The Guildhall with its overhanging facade, is said to be the oldest municipal building in Great Britain. Here the wealthy merchants of the city transacted their business in the time of Queen Elizabeth, when Exeter was noted for the manufacture of woollens. It was also during Elizabeth's reign that the Exeter ship canal was built—the first canal in England to permit sea-going vessels to reach an inland port.

"Exeter today has a population of over 59,000, and is an important center of agricultural trade. Its various industries include brewing, paper making and iron founding. Tourist traffic during the summer season is very heavy, especially since it is well located as a base for tours of the west country. Daily motor buses leave the huge city terminal for all parts of Devon and Cornwall."

Record forms for keeping books on the poultry flock may be obtained from county agricultural agents. Bookkeeping starts Oct. 1. Cost of the record forms are 15 cents, printing cost.

FREE ACT SCHEDULE PROMISES THRILLS

Four excellent free acts have been arranged by Thomas D. Krinn, director of Department No. 7 and vice president of the Pumpkin Show. They will be held as in previous years at Main and Pickaway-sts at 2 and 7 p. m., at Court and High-sts at 3 and 8 p. m., at Main and Western-ave at 4 and 9 p. m. and at the courthouse at 5 and 10 p. m.

The Main-Pickaway act will be Harry Bauers in an aerial act; the Court-High act will be Capt. Earl E. McDonald, sensational high fire diver; the Main-Western act will be the Marriott troupe of aerialists, and the courthouse act will be the renowned Conley trio. This outfit performing on high poles is a real sensation and will be remembered from two years ago.

KRINN SATISFIED

Mr. Krinn, who has been picking free acts for a long, long while, vouches for every one of the acts scheduled for this year.

Plenty of music will be provided during the entire week with Circleville high school band and the Junior band scheduled for appearances. The high school band, under the direction of Prof. C. F. Zaenglein, will play each afternoon and evening.

Site Was Once Occupied by Saxon Churches.

Washington.—Exeter, ancient capital of England's southwest, and county town of Devon, is celebrating the eight hundredth anniversary of the consecration of its famous cathedral.

"Even older than the cathedral is the Bishopric of Devon and Cornwall, which was transferred to Exeter by Edward I in 1050," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "The building of the cathedral was begun sixty years later under William the Conqueror. The site chosen had been twice occupied by Saxon churches, the first built by Athelstan, the second by Canute.

"All that remains today of the original Norman structure are two low massive towers at either end of the transept. The rest of the cathedral was completely rebuilt during the Fourteenth century in the rich style of Decorated Gothic.

"Walter de Stapeldon, bishop of Exeter, and one of the foremost patrons of English art and letters during the early Fourteenth century, had a large share in this transformation. It was Stapeldon also who in 1314 founded Exeter college, Oxford; and in 1332, Exeter grammar school.

Modern Exeter occupies a broad ridge of land on the left bank of the River Exe. At the head of this ridge, hidden by ivy and set in a wide shaded park, are the ruins of Rougemont castle, built by William the Conqueror.

Mol's Coffee House.

"Narrow, stone-paved streets wind between ancient timbered houses, crumbling chapels, and fine old churches. Exeter is a veritable city of churches. In the time of William the Conqueror she possessed no less than twenty-nine! Across the square from the cathedral stands Mol's coffee house, favorite meeting place of those gay adventurers of Devon—Drake, Hawkins, Gilbert and Raleigh.

"The Guildhall with its overhanging facade, is said to be the oldest municipal building in Great Britain. Here the wealthy merchants of the city transacted their business in the time of Queen Elizabeth, when Exeter was noted for the manufacture of woollens. It was also during Elizabeth's reign that the Exeter ship canal was built—the first canal in England to permit sea-going vessels to reach an inland port.

"Exeter today has a population of over 50,000, and is an important center of agricultural trade. Its various industries include brewing, paper making and iron founding. Tourist traffic during the summer season is very heavy, especially since it is well located as a base for tours of the west country. Daily motor busses leave the huge city terminal for all parts of Devon and Cornwall."

BUCHANAN BEHIND SCHOOLS' EXHIBIT

D. L. BUCHANAN has undertaken one of the biggest tasks any Pumpkin Show director has ever tried, a Pickaway-co school exhibit which gives promise of being one of the most interesting displays of the Pumpkin Show. The exhibit is located in the Wilkes property on W. Main-st and is well worth the time of all show visitors.

Alaska's Vast Territory

If the Territory of Alaska were divided equally among its inhabitants, each person would own 10.7 square miles, while if the same thing were done in the United States proper each person would get only 18 acres.

Impressive Edifice.

"Upon entering the cathedral one receives the impression of great length and remarkable symmetry of design. Each part is balanced; and the long, low effect increased by an unbroken roofline extending through nave and choir. On the wall of the north transept is a great clock which has ticked since the days of Edward II in the Fourteenth century. It has two dials, one showing the hours and the moon's phases, the other recording the minutes. In the library is the ancient Codex Exoniensis, a Ninth century collection of Anglo-Saxon poetry, which has been in the possession of the cathedral since the Eleventh century.

"All the history and loyal, independent spirit of the west county is concentrated in Exeter, Queen Elizabeth's 'ever faithful city.' As a Roman town, Isca Damnoniorum, it is a little younger than Paris and as old as London. When the Romans left it in the Fifth century it became the Caer Isc of the Britons and the Exancestre of the Saxons.

"During succeeding centuries it endured countless sieges; Saxons, Britons, Danes, and Normans fought to enter the walls. Later the loyal townsmen staunchly upheld their king in many a revolt. Exeter still remembers the time that Edward the Confessor spent Christmas there; and the day when William of

Poultry and Pet Exhibits.

T. Shaner's department of Pumpkin Show gives promise of another excellent feature to the event. His department is divided into two sections: swine, Harry J. Briggs in charge, and poultry and pets with Cliff M.
and Harry Lane in charge.
The swine will be located at the corner Western-ave and the poultry on S. Court-st. although farther south than usual.

A large tent is provided for the swine display with the best of protection afforded the animals. Entries close Wednesday at noon.
Premiums are awarded Poland
Chinas, Duroc Jerseys, Chester Whites and Hampshires with $5 awards going to the grand champion prize money will be paid between exhibitors in the class. Second prize awards are given on classes without competition.
Chickens, ducks of all breeds, geese, all varieties of turkeys, pigeons, all varieties of rabbits and guinea pigs will receive prizes in the display under White and Lane.
All entries close at noon Wednesday.

Golden Prolific Breeder

The goldfish is a prolific breeder, as are all other members of the carp family and being ground feeders, or "mudders," they destroy the spawn of other game fishes. Lakes and rivers infested with carp or goldfish usually have nothing else, and unless they are sealed out they shortly dominate the waters.

Jailed for Non-Payment

In 1830, according to a report published then by the Boston Prison

10,000 persons annually for nonpayment of debt in New York; 7,000 in Pennsylvania; 3,000 in Maryland, and 3,000 in Massachusetts.

YANKEES ENMESHED BY OPIUM SCANDAL

Brought to Light by Raid of Peiping Police.

Peiping.—A raid on the Hotel Middle Kingdom staged by Chinese police, troops and Japanese troops, in which a score or more Chinese and Koreans were arrested for drug dealing, served to draw foreign attention to the use of opium in Peiping. The normal American resident, while aware that the drug can be had easily, generally lets it go at that.

However, in the discussion, it appeared that young Americans, girls as well as boys, who came to China for a few weeks have begun to take a whirl with the opium pipe. These youths bear names very often of well-known and highly respected American families and their actions decidedly shock the American community of Peiping.

In some cases they request Chinese servants to provide the drug and pipes. The former in disgust have been known to quit rather than oblige. One American resident was dragged into the opium scandalous unwittingly when the police discovered that the servants' quarters housed an opium salesroom.

Opium figures very largely in the news from almost every section of China. Officials are either honestly endeavoring to suppress the drug or else they are conniving in its distribution. At Hangchow four high officials were executed for dealing in the nefarious trade.

Kaifeng, capital of Honan province, celebrated Opium Prohibition day when the city was festooned with flags and a mass meeting held presided over by the governor.

The opium prohibition inspector publicly reported that poppies were still being grown in 50 counties, but a systematic campaign was being waged to end such production.
He asked for six years in which to completely stamp out opium growing, sales, and smoking within the province. He is already enforcing his plan by sending out soldiers who loot off the poppy flowers with their big swords as their rifles swing from the other shoulder.

French Welcome Germans With Spending Money

Paris.—Fifteen years after the World war, the Germans have taken Paris.

A horde of Teutons has descended and taken possession of the night clubs, theaters, restaurants and cafes. On the boulevards, at the races and in the lobbies of concert halls, German is the language of the day.

Some of the invaders are German Jews, some are political exiles, and others are tourists. Paris has gathered them in, just as she welcomed American and British visitors of other days.

The warmth of this welcome may or may not have been determined by the fact that the invaders are spending money. Despite the difficulty of transferring capital out of the reich, they are the chief patrons of those places where only money will do.

Probably in deference to them,
Paris is having a season of German music.

2,000-Year-Old Theater Unearthed in England

London.—A music hall of 2,000 years ago has been excavated at St.
Albans. Dr. R. E. Mortimer Wheeler, who is directing the excavations, explains this music hall as being an ordinary classical theater, with semi-circular auditorium and small stage in front.

Doctor Wheeler said: "We are digging on the site of the prehistoric city, where we have found further traces of the defenses showing that the city before Roman times extended for upwards of half a mile across the hilltop overlooking the River Ver."

Within the Roman city a series of houses have been unearthed which throw more light on the street plan of the ancient city. The city itself was built in a number of large blocks nearly 400 feet square, each block containing a large number of houses and shops

Officials Run Town From Prison Cells

Boston.—The entire town government of Wendell, a municipality in the western part of the state with a population of 353 persons, is in jail, but conducts the town government just the same.

The three officials not only serve as selectmen but fulfill the functions also of the board of public welfare and the registrars of voters. They were convicted many months ago of having unlawfully left off the voting list the names of three persons, a husband, wife and daughter, thus depriving them of their voting rights.

They lost their appeal, and a superior court judge, in spite of a petition in their behalf signed by 180 registered voters of the town, sentenced them to three months in the county house of correction.

Another thing they learn in college is that the benefits of education is forgotten.

New Features Help Parades

Parades in this year's Pumpkin Show are expected to surpass those of recent years in brilliance and variety. Proctor Baughman, director of the parade department, has added two new features to help the show. They are a beauty parade on the opening night of the big event and an Old Vehicle parade on Saturday. Heretofore there has been no parade on Saturday night.

Mrs. Nelle Phillips and Robert Adkins will be in charge of the beauty parade with a "Miss Pumpkin Show," to officiate in each parade thereafter, to be chosen. Only one prize is allotted to this event, that being a beautiful diamond ring which is now on display in the window of the Press Hosiery jewelry shop.

And, oh yes, here's a catch; Mayor B. T. Hedges is going to ride in a private automobile with "Miss Pumpkin show" in each subsequent parade. He doesn't know it but he's going to do it anyway.

16 IS AGE LIMIT

All entries in this parade must be over 16 years of age and must have been residents of Pickaway county at least six months before the event.

The baby parade will begin Thursday at 2:15 p. m. with Mrs. H. G. Stevenson and Mrs. Mary G. Morris in charge. All entries must take part in the parade to be eligible. Six of the 11 classes must be in buggies.

Prizes will be awarded the prettiest white baby under one year of age, the prettiest colored baby under one year of age, the prettiest white baby between one and two, the prettiest colored baby between one and two, the prettiest white baby between two and three, the prettiest colored baby between two and three, the prettiest pair of twins up to three years of age, the prettiest pair of colored twins up to three years of age, the best play outfit with little girl in charge open to both white and colored, best novelty outfit with child in charge open to both white and colored, the prettiest and most artistically decorated baby buggy, buggy only to be considered.

L. E. Miller is in charge of the horse and pony parade on Thursday evening, the parade moving at 7:15. To be eligible for prizes in the various sections of the Horse Show all entries must appear in this parade. Immediately following the parade will be the horse show.

FEATURES ADDED

The industrial parade on Friday at 2:15 p. m. promises to be an interesting one. Earl Kibler and Earl Lutz are in charge of it. Prizes of $10, $7, $5 and $3 are to be given for the best decorated passenger automobiles, best agricultural display on wagon, truck or trailer and most artistic float mounted on wagon, truck or trailer. The agricultural display awards are new.

It is also announced that an advertising section has been placed in the industrial parade with no premiums to be given. A number of Columbus floats will be brought to this city with between 35 and 45 expected to be listed.

Miss Ann Bennett, Miss Peggy Courtwright and Miss Jane Mader are in charge of the comic and characterization parade on Friday at 7:15 p. m. Prizes of $5, $4, $3 and $2 will be given in both comic and characterization events. 35 acts are permitted in the comic event but not in the characterization where some special character must be portrayed.

On Saturday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock comes the pet parade directed by Linden Baughman and Harold Davis. This section includes awards for typical boy and pet, typical girl and pet, pony outfit open to boys and girls, novel display of pets, unusual pets, open class with any pet of any kind permitted, and prizes for the greatest number of different pets entered by any one person.

The Old Vehicle parade on Saturday at 7:15 p. m. is directed by Walker Baughman and Sennet M. Cryder.

Prizes of $5, $4, $3, $2 and $1 are awarded in an automotive section with entries to be run under their own cover; a horse section with any vehicle that has horses for power allowed; hand section must be pushed by adults; hand section vehicles must be pushed by children; hand section-b with any vehicles in this class to be pulled by adults; hand section-c with any type vehicle not mentioned in any of the above classes.

PRIZE WINNERS MARCH

Another new feature, a Prize Winners parade, is planned to form on the end of the Old Vehicle parade. These will be winners from the various parades of the show. Two hundred and eighty or more entries all told will form at the end of the Old Vehicle parade.

Star-Harvester King Romance

Although it was denied when first rumored last August, a marriage will take place between Pola Negri, Polish screen star, and Harold F. McCormick, Chicago harvester millionaire, before the "snow flies in the Bois de Boulogne," according to friends of the couple. Both have had two previous marriages. McCormick's first wife was Edith Rockefeller McCormick, daughter of the oil king. His second was Ganna Walska, opera singer. Miss Negri's initial plunge into matrimony was with Count Eugene Donski, Polish army officer, whom she divorced when she attained fame on the stage. Her second husband was Prince Serge Mdivani, of the Georgian brothers, who married Mary McCormick, opera singer, after Pola had divorced him. Miss McCormick is now suing for separate maintenance from the prince.

Fear Cruellest Taskmaster

Fear is one of the cruellest taskmasters that ever binds and shackles the human will. Probably most of the failures in life are traceable to the deadening influence of fear. The world's great pioneers, its mapmakers, its empire builders, its great inventors and its finest philosophers have been those who were least affected by fear.

"Won His Spurs"

Golden spurs were one of the emblems of knighthood in the days of feudalism. The page and squire were both in training for knighthood, and when one was knighted, usually for valor in battle, he was said to have "won his spurs." The expression now implies that the person has received a desired promotion, or achieved success in some other way.

Johns-Manville presents FLOYD GIBBONS

With exciting news about A MILLION DOLLARS TO LEND

For Home Repairs and Improvements

Don't miss this famous headline hunter tonight! He's got new thrills, new experiences for everybody. But, most important, he's got one of the biggest pieces of news he ever broadcast. All about an amazing million dollar fund set aside by Johns-Manville to help home owners do those needed repair and remodeling jobs now, with a year to pay in easy installments.

If lack of ready cash has prevented you from making repairs and improvements, you will certainly want to hear what Floyd Gibbons has to say about this amazing fund and how you can get your share of it.

We are headquarters for this million dollar fund. If it's a new roof, an extra room in the attic, tiled kitchen or bathroom walls, your home made comfortable with J-M Home Insulation — or any of a dozen other important jobs, come in and see us. We shall be glad to give you full details without obligation.

Hear Him Every Monday Over WLW at 8:30.

New Features Help Parades

Parades in this year's Pumpkin Show are expected to surpass those of recent years in brilliancy and variety. Proctor Baughman, director of the parade department, has added two new features to greatly help the show. They are a beauty parade on the opening night of the big event and an Old Vehicle parade on Saturday. Heretofore there has been no parade on Saturday night.

Mrs. Nelle Phillips and Robert Adkins will be in charge of the beauty parade with a "Miss Pumpkin Show," to officiate in each parade thereafter, to be chosen. Only one prize is allotted to this event, that being a beautiful diamond ring which is now on display in the window of the Press-Hosier jewelry shop.

And, oh yes, here's a catch; Mayor B. T. Hedges is going to ride in a private automobile with "Miss Pumpkin Show." He doesn't know it but he's going to do it anyway.

16 IS AGE LIMIT

All entries in this parade must be over 16 years of age and must have been residents of Pickaway-co at least six months before the event.

The baby parade will begin Thursday at 2:15 p. m. with Mrs. H. G. Stevenson and Mrs. Mary G. Morris in charge. All entries must take part in the parade to be eligible. Six of the 11 classes must be in buggies.

Prizes will be awarded the prettiest white baby under one year of age, the prettiest colored baby under one year of age, the prettiest white baby between one and two,

the prettiest colored baby between one and two, the prettiest white baby between two and three, the prettiest colored baby between two and three, the prettiest pair of twins up to three years of age, the prettiest pair of colored twins up to three years of age, the best play outfit with little girl in charge open to both white and colored, best novelty outfit, with child in charge open to both white and colored, the prettiest and most artistically decorated baby buggy, buggy only to be considered.

School Exhibit Is Promising

An attempt at one of the big- paid as listed, all judging in club gest and most important features of any county fair, street fair or Pumpkin Show, is being made this year to supplant the 4-H club work which became a dead issue when it was decided no county agent would be employed to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of H. Stanley Lewis.

The state makes no appropriation for a county to continue 4-H club work unless an appropriation is made by the county for an Agricultural Extension agent.

A suitable outlet has been provided by the Pumpkin Show society which is operating through D. L. Buchanan, superintendent of county schools. Premiums are being offered on pure bred livestock and a County School exhibit which promises to be a real feature is ready for the public.

IN WILKES BLOCK

The School exhibit is located in the Wilkes building on W. Main-st.
General rules of the livestock exhibit include: all exhibits in livestock line to be pure bred; judging to be done by a foreign judge;
calf club to consist of foreign bred Guernseys, all premiums to be

Subjects to be entered in the school exhibit are too numerous to list here but it can be said they include almost every phase of school work. Individual awards from $6 down to 40 cents are listed.

Rules followed in the school exhibit are that all entries are free and confined to the schools of the county. They must be in place before 5 p. m. the first day of the show. Exhibits will be judged on Thursday with quality, quantity, variety and artistic arrangement to be taken into consideration in awarding premiums.

No display or any part thereof may be taken from the room before 3 p. m. on the last day of the show.

Teachers, pupils and parents are rallying behind the school exhibit project and the display promises to take large crowds to the Wilkes building.

The NRA has taken 100,000 children out of jobs and put them back in school. Putting something

Pomeranians

Pomeranians are highly important members of the toy dog division in pure-bred classification.
Their jaunty, pirouetting move-

School Exhibit Is Promising

An attempt at one of the biggest and most important features of any county fair, street fair or Pumpkin Show, is being made this year to supplant the 4-H club work which became a dead issue when it was decided no county agent would be employed to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of H. Stanley Lewis.

The state makes no appropriation for a county to continue 4-H club work unless an appropriation is made by the county for an Agricultural Extension agent. A suitable outlet has been provided by the Pumpkin Show society which is operating through D. L. Buchanan, superintendent of county schools. Premiums are being offered on pure bred livestock and a County School exhibit which promises to be a real feature is ready for the public.

IN WILKES BLOCK

The School exhibit is located in the Wilkes building on W. Main-st. General rules of the livestock exhibit include: all exhibits in livestock line to be pure bred; judging to be done by a foreign judge; club to consist of foreign bred Guernseys, all premiums to be paid as listed, all judging in club work to be on the basis of product.

Subjects to be entered in the school exhibit are too numerous to list here but it can be said they include almost every phase of school work. Individual awards from $6 down to 40 cents are listed.

Rules followed in the school exhibit are that all entries are free and confined to the schools of the county. They must be in place before 5 p. m. the first day of the show. Exhibits will be judged on Thursday with quality, quantity, variety and artistic arrangement to be taken into consideration in awarding premiums.

No display or any part thereof can be taken from the room before 3 p. m. on the last day of the show.

Teachers, pupils and parents are rallying behind the school exhibit project and the display promises to take large crowds to the Wilkes building.

The NRA has taken 100,000 children out of jobs and put them back in school. Putting something

Show's Secretary Busy Year Round

MACK PARRET, JR., is again in the center of activities as secretary of the show. It is up to him to place all stands and at the same time try to please all exhibitors. His work is not confined to Pumpkin Show week but the entire year around with much correspondence to be handled. He'll not have a free minute during the week.

Pomeranians

Pomeranians are highly important members of the toy dog division in pure-bred classification. Their jaunty, prancing movements have made them favorites of many toy and lapdog fanciers. In general appearance the pom is small, compact and short-coupled, with plenty of expression and an abundant coat.

The Oldest Treaty

The bureau of archives says that the oldest treaty deposited with the Department of State is the treaty of amity and commerce with France of February 6, 1778. This was the first treaty made by the infant United States after the Declaration of Independence.
